FIELDS SERVED BY D and W

The publication in which shipper, carrier, receiver, warehouseman and equipment manufacturer meet on common ground to obtain and exchange ideas and suggestions for more efficient and economical distribution of raw materials and finished products. D and W is a clearing house of information for all who are interested in:

SHIPPING . . . . by air, highway, rail and water, of raw materials and finished products of all kinds, from points of origin to points of ultimate destination. D and W insists that efficiency and economy are as imperative in transportation of commodities as in manufacturing and selling.

HANDLING . . . of raw materials and finished products, in bulk, in packages, and in palletized units, for and during production, transportation, storage and distribution. D and W submits that handling costs are a vital factor in determining profits.

WAREHOUSING . of raw materials, finished products and miscellaneous supplies for any or all of the following reasons: as collateral for loans; to anticipate seasonal buying; to obtain lower rates by making bulk rather than l.c.l. shipments; to have spot stocks readily available at important market centers; as an aid in developing new markets. D and W maintains that, for efficient and economical distribution, intelligent and practical warehousing is indispensable.

DISTRIBUTION . . of anything anywhere from points of origin and production to points of ultimate use and consumption whether sectional, national or international. D and W takes the position that more efficient and economical distribution is the present major problem of modern business.

Distribution Standards

THE efficiency and economy of industrial production in this country have been made possible, in no small measure, by two factors: simplification and standardization of products and of methods. Nothing comparable has ever been done in the field of distribution. If it were, costs of distribution could be lowered, as production costs have been, and probably with similar results, beneficial both to consumers and distributors.

From a variety of causes, distribution in the United States has become increasingly complex and costly. Distribution is too complicated, too cumbersome and costs too much. It needs to be simplified and standardized, not in one industry but in all.

This cannot be accomplished easily. There is no panacea available, nor can any formula be devised that will fit all industries. However, the problems involved are not insoluble. They are man made and, therefore, can be changed by man. The first requisite, of course, is that men must desire simpler and better methods of distribution. If that is what we want, three human qualities only are needed to accomplish it: intelligence, perseverance and co-operation.

Some of the reasons why distribution is so costly are indicated elsewhere in this issue in the summary of the Federal Trade Commission's exhaustive report on distribution costs in the food industry. Other reasons are explained and some constructive suggestions made toward a simplification of the problem in Dr. Frederick's able analysis of the "Changing Concepts of Distribution," which appears also in this issue.

Indorsing the concept that D and W has advocated for some time past, namely, that distribution begins with the origin of raw materials and ends only when a finished product has reached its ultimate destination, that is, the final user or consumer, Dr. Frederick explains that changing conditions make this broad concept of distribution more necessary now than ever. We agree. But the concept is valid at any time and under any conditions in an industrial society. The reason is obvious: if distribution begins with the origin of raw materials, before production starts, and continues after production or fabrication ends, the importance of distribution under any system of economics is fundamental and indispensable.

If distribution in the United States is to be made more efficient and economical, and, thereby, more profitable for everybody, not only broader concepts but more determined organized efforts will be needed. It is suggested that coordinated planning within industrial groups should be undertaken to simplify and standardize specific methods and practices. If that could be supplemented by the establishment of an Institute of Distribution, properly organized to undertake not research only but the analysis and synthesis of facts obtained by research, then we might be able to establish standards in distribution comparable, in their way, to those which have made it possible for American industrial production to achieve its unique and imperishable record.

Gold in Post-War Trade

IF Russia does business on a gold basis after the war, as Moscow dispatches indicate, the U.S.S.R. may be able to increase its foreign trade at the expense of the United States and Great Britain. This could easily happen if America and England, with other allied nations, should attempt to carry out proposed plans to stabilize world currencies by means of an international bank, which would issue paper currency against deposited assets for the settlement of trade balances between member nations.

Experience has demonstrated that long established trade customs are not easily up-rooted. Gold is an ancient, convenient and standardized medium of exchange. Most of the world still seems to prefer it to anything else. How much buying power do you suppose a new kind of international paper currency would have in Asia, Africa, Latin America, or even Europe, after the war, in competition with gold or silver bullion?

England and most of our present allies are rather short on gold. The United States is not. Neither is Russia. Why should we allow ourselves to be hoodwinked? The facts are plain enough. After this war we are not going to be as rich as we were. Neither is Russia. But Russia is realistic. In contrast, we are obsessed by an idealistic international altruism that is likely to ruin us if we persist in it. Russia has no scruple whatever about doing what seems best for Russia. Can we afford to do less for America?

Refrigeration Research

BY its establishment of The Refrigeration Research Foundation the cold storage industry has taken the most constructive action possible not only for its own future security and progress but for the benefit of the general public as well. The Foundation should receive intelligent and whole-hearted support from the entire industry.

Changing Concepts

A MORE comprehensive understanding of distribution is imperative for post-war business. By considering it merely as a local, individual or regional problem, economical and efficient distribution will be impossible to attain. D and W's contention that distribution begins with the origin of raw materials and ends only at the ultimate point of consumption or use, properly considered, is completely valid and is endorsed and advocated by the writer. Such a concept is essential if our post-war economy is to be more closely integrated for more efficient and economical distribution of our products nationally and internationally.

IN many respects our post-war problems are going to be those of distribution rather than production. For this reason, an editorial in the November issue of D and W, urging a broader concept and understanding of distribution and stressing the fact that "distribution begins with the origin of raw materials and ends only when a finished product has reached its ultimate destination, that is, the final user or consumer," is of vital importance to businessmen everywhere. This concept would be arresting under any circumstances but in to-day's changing world it is particularly significant.

Certainly, our concept of distribution as a national, state, county or city matter will no longer suffice. This war is proving that "no spot on earth is more than 60 hours from any manufacturing plant" anywhere. The realization of this fact is shocking during war time, but the tremendous implications with respect to post-war distribution of raw materials, and of industrial and consumer goods should bring home to producers the desirability of preparing for customer demands from Bombay, Rome, Melbourne, Chungking or Rio de Janeiro, just as formerly they did business with Chicago, St. Louis, Houston or Los Angeles.

If our concepts of distribution are being changed by the war they will certainly be changed even more radically by post-war developments such as the following:

1. Improved methods of transportation. This war is giving us a true concept of the possibilities of air transportation for cargo, mail and passengers. The isolation factor which formerly was so important in reaching many parts of the world has been lessened or removed by air transportation. Think what this will mean for distribution! Improvements in one field of transportation will bring about changes for the better in other fields. Already the railroads and steamship operators are making plans to better their services so as to compete with air transportation.

2. New techniques of production. New products, new uses for old products, and new materials being developed, or which will be available for commercial use after the war, may solve or create many new distribution problems.

3. Changing distribution channels. For several years the agencies through which finished goods and raw materials pass from sources of production to points of effective consumption have been "in a state of flux." After the war the channel of distribution which used to work may not be so effective. New types of middlemen may be available.

4. Population shifts. During the war years many areas have had very large population increases. Many small rural communities have lost population to war production centers and have surplus housing facilities. What is going to happen after the war? Are war workers going to stay where they now are, or are they going to go back to where they came from? Probably the answer lies between these two extremes. But where? Many distribution problems depend for their solution on where our population is and what our people will be doing in the post-war era.

5. Producer change-over to peacetime production. Many manufacturers apparently will have little or no change-over problem. Some chemicals used in the war effort are precisely the same as those used in peacetimes. The manufacturer of electric motors is probably using the same equipment and processes he used before the war. In other cases, however, the change-over will be time-consuming and expensive. Quite a number of manufacturers are reported as planning on making products they have not made before or discontinuing items they have made and with which they have had considerable experience. This means that there may be a good many unconventional things done in distribution. Some of these may be ill-advised; some of them may be marked improvements over the old methods.

6. Government controls. Some restrictions may be extended. Others may be curtailed. The government's policies may affect not only international trade but domestic competition as well.

DISTRIBUTION begins before production and continues after production ends. Consequently, a better understanding and broader concept of distribution for the future is necessary if we are to realize our industrial potentialities.

In view of these and other possibilities, a more comprehensive understanding of distribution is imperative for post-war business. By considering it merely as a local, individual or regional problem, economical and efficient distribution will be impossible to attain. D and W's contention that distribution begins with the origin of raw materials and ends only at the ultimate point of consumption or use, properly considered, is completely valid and is endorsed and advocated by the writer. Such a concept is essential if our post-war economy is to be more closely integrated for more efficient and economical distribution of our products nationally and internationally.

The war certainly has demonstrated that American industry knows how to beat production problems. In fact, before the war no one doubted our supremacy in the field of producing goods. It was in the task of providing consumers at home and abroad with the goods they wanted, when and where they wanted them, in the manner in which they desired them and at the lowest possible cost to these consumers in money or exertion or both that we fell down. S. Morris Livingston, of the Department of Commerce, in his "Markets After the War," an elaborate post-war study, points out that as business has already demonstrated its ability to produce, "the post-war problem becomes largely one of distribution."

The need for a more comprehensive understanding of distribution becomes even more manifest when it is understood that distribution, broadly speaking, embraces among its activities all that series of activities often referred to as "marketing," but which are more truly described by the term "distribution," because they are concerned with the flow of goods from points of production to points of

of Distribution

CERTAINLY our concept of distribution as a national, state, county or city matter will no longer suffice. This war is proving that "no spot on earth is more than 60 hours from any manufacturing plant" anywhere. The realization of this fact is shocking in war time, but the tremendous implications with respect to post-war distribution of raw materials, and of industrial and consumer goods should bring home to producers the desirability of preparing for customer demands from Bombay, Rome, Melbourne, Chunking or Rio de Janeiro, just as formerly they did business with Chicago, St. Louis, Houston or Los Angeles.

consumption or use. Distribution begins before production and continues after production ends. Consequently, a better understanding and broader concept of distribution for the future is necessary if we are to realize our industrial potentialities.

No matter where a thing is produced or consumed there are certain things that have to be done to it by someone. In other words, there are certain functions of distribution that have to be performed for practically all commodities. These functions are usually classified by writers on marketing and distribution as follows:

A. Those involving transfer of title: 1. Selling. 2. Buying. B. Those involving physical supply: 1. Transportation. 2. Storage. C. Those aiding in the performance of A and B: 1. Standardizing. 2. Financing. 3. Risk management. 4. Market information.

Readers of D and W, in the past, have been concerned primarily with those functions of distribution involving transportation and storage. But if a true concept of what is involved in distribution is to be had it will be necessary to consider all the functions and to understand how they fit into the matter of physical supply. For example:

Selling comprises all those personal and impersonal activities involved in finding, securing and developing a demand for a given product or service and in making the sale of it.

Buying involves all those activities involved in finding a suitable source of supply, selecting the desired quantity, quality, grade, style and size, and coming to an agreement on price, delivery date and other conditions.

Transportation of some sort is involved in nearly all transfers of title. Both buying and selling functions end with the transfer of title and nearly every change of ownership of goods is accompanied by a change in their physical location. As the distances between producers and consumers increase the importance of transportation as a function of distribution naturally expands. For quite a time the cost of performing this function has made up a significant part of the whole cost of distribution.

Storage permeates the whole field of distribution. Under modern distributive practices both for manufactured and agricultural products, goods have to be stored at every step throughout the process of getting them from producers to consumers. This is necessary in most cases to make adjustments between irregularities in production and demand, but other reasons for storage have arisen with the development of extensive commercial or territorial division of labor and mass methods of manufacture.

Standardizing as a function of distribution deals with the process of sorting and grading. A grade has been defined as a unit of quality, and grading refers to the actual dividing or sorting of raw materials such as agricultural products into lots of uniform quality in conformity with certain rules of standardization. This function is more difficult to carry out for agricultural products and certain raw materials than it is for manufactured goods.

Financing may be defined as the provision and management of the money and credit necessary to get goods from the producer into the hands of the consumer. It is an important function in all distribution since it is necessary whenever ownership is transferred.

Risk management is found in every step in the distribution of any commodity. Certain risks must be assumed or avoided in so far as possible. In marketing agricultural products, for example, the greatest of these risks, aside from the danger of perishable commodities spoiling or deteriorating in quality, is the risk of price fluctuation. To a certain degree this risk of price fluctuation is present in all distribution and has to be assumed by everyone who takes title to goods, and varies in degree with the length of time between purchase and sale of any goods. Because of the operations of organized speculators in certain agricultural and raw material trades, it is possible for holders of commodities to shift the risk of price changes to such traders and speculators through the purchase and sale of contracts for future delivery. Other risks, such as loss or damage by fire, may be entirely shifted to insurance companies.

Market information has become more and more important as markets for various products have widened and will become increasingly so as distribution becomes worldwide. Buyers and sellers must not only have adequate information on the price of available goods in their own markets but throughout the world. They must have detailed facts on the outlook for raw materials entering into the product in which they are interested. If it is fabricated they must know labor conditions, customer preferences and many other equally important points. The elaborate organizations which have been created to supply such basic data, as well as trade papers in various fields, are important units in the distributive organization upon which world trade is based.

These diverse but inter-related functions have evolved naturally and of necessity in most fields of distribution since the Industrial Revolution of the 19th century, and are results of the separation of producer and

THE significant thing for us in the post-war distributive picture is that the division of labor in distribution, in its broadest sense, will continue, together with its many attendant problems. However, we have learned a lot about distribution in the past 50 years, and many new techniques will be applied. Greater control and integration seem likely in the future. Among other things, market research and analysis are pointing the way toward this.

DISTRIBUTION problems have always been individual for every manufacturer and for most groups of raw material producers, and no standard has ever been developed. Lack of standards is a real and potential danger particularly in a war economy where the entire subject of distribution deserves the closest and most careful attention of all marketing and sales executives if serious mistakes are to be avoided either now or after the close of hostilities.

consumer which has come about since division of labor became just as characteristic a feature of the distributive process as of production. This has profoundly influenced the organization and methods of distribution with which we are familiar.

The principle of division of labor involves not only the idea that certain persons or groups of persons shall confine their efforts to producing a certain thing or even to a given sequence of operations in such production, but also the concept of geographic specialization. As a result, certain industries are concentrated in certain areas of a country or perhaps in certain parts of the world. This localization of industry results in separating the producer from the consumer both in time and in space.

As we begin to make use of new distribution techniques, particularly air transportation, the space will remain the same but time will be reduced to a mere fraction of what it has been. We will measure distance by hours not by miles.

The separation of producer and consumer has had certain very definite influences on distribution and on the way it could be carried out. It created a need for middlemen to bridge the gap between maker or producer and user. Wholesalers, commission merchants, brokers, manufacturers' agents, retailers, and other intermediaries came into distribution to meet this need. A complicated system of such agents has been built up, but in recent years their number and importance have been reduced somewhat by changes in the marketing policies of many manufacturers and in the development of new retailing institutions.

However, we still have too complex and in many lines an over-extended middleman organization allowing the interposition of more such agencies than are necessary. This accelerates the pyramiding of distributor margins to the point where their total often adds unreasonably to the price the consumer must pay.

The separation of producer and consumer also gave rise to a lack of understanding between them. Bargaining or buying and selling could no longer be carried on directly between the parties involved. It had to be through intermediaries and at long distances. The tremendous amount of advertising and the many salesmen involved in the process of marketing represent attempts, in part, to solve the problems raised by this separation.

A third result of the separation of producer and consumer has been the loss to the producer of practically all control over the conditions under which his product has been sold and used.

Because he sold them himself, the medieval producer could fix the prices at which his products were sold to the ultimate consumer. Manufacturers of today have had to work out all sorts of schemes to force retailers to sell at prices specified. The medieval producer was so situated that he was able to observe the way in which his products were used by buyers and so could deal with complaints and claims for adjustments. The modern manufacturer lacks direct means of making such observations. In selling his goods the producer, in years before distribution became so complicated, could make any claims and guaranties for them he wanted to. The manufacturer of today has little control over what the various agents who handle his products may say or do. This condition has lead to attempts to control these matters by advertising, selling direct, doing various types of sales-promotion, and service work, and the practicing of resale-price maintenance.

Finally, the fact that producer and consumer were no longer in close proximity raised certain problems regarding the quality of goods made and sold. When specialization increased the output and localization of production put considerable distances between the maker and those who used his goods the maker no longer "produced for local use" but "produced for general sale." When goods were produced for general sale they often became anonymous.

In time, producers who felt sufficiently confident of the quality of their products to be willing to stake their business reputations upon them began to sell under brand names or trade-marks. The phenomenal growth of this practice has been one of the outstanding features of the history of distribution in the United States. Its development, of course, was stimulated by other factors, but its initial impetus and most powerful motivating force are found in the desire to bridge the gap between producer and consumer.

The significant thing for us in the post-war distributive picture is that the division of labor in distribution in its broadest sense will continue, together with its many attendant problems. However, we have learned a lot about distribution in the past 50 years, and many new techniques will be applied. Greater control and integration seem likely in the future. Among other things, market research and analysis already are pointing the way toward this.

The importance of market or distribution analysis in post-war distribution cannot be over-emphasized. It will detect hidden troubles, discover new buying trends, locate markets, unearth new opportunities, lower distribution costs and furnish facts by which management may chart a sound course for the post-war years. This type of study is more important today than it ever was in peace-time.

As so aptly stated by Dr. Vergil D. Reed, Director of Statistics for the War Production Board, "To win the war through production and lose the peace through distribution would be America's greatest tragedy."

Can anything be done to avoid this "tragedy"? Can we establish essential standards in distribution approximating the basic standards in production? Here are three suggestions for a beginning:

1. Achieve a broader concept of distribution by business executives and others and a better understanding of its essential functions. Much of this might be accomplished through the active cooperation of trade associations in all the various fields of distribution; through publicity of the right sort; through educational activity.

2. A coordinated effort to establish basic standards of distribution for individual industries—manufacturers or raw material producers—by means of joint committees within broad industry groups. Trade associations and the framework that has been set up under the War Production Board and other governmental agencies might be used to get this started.

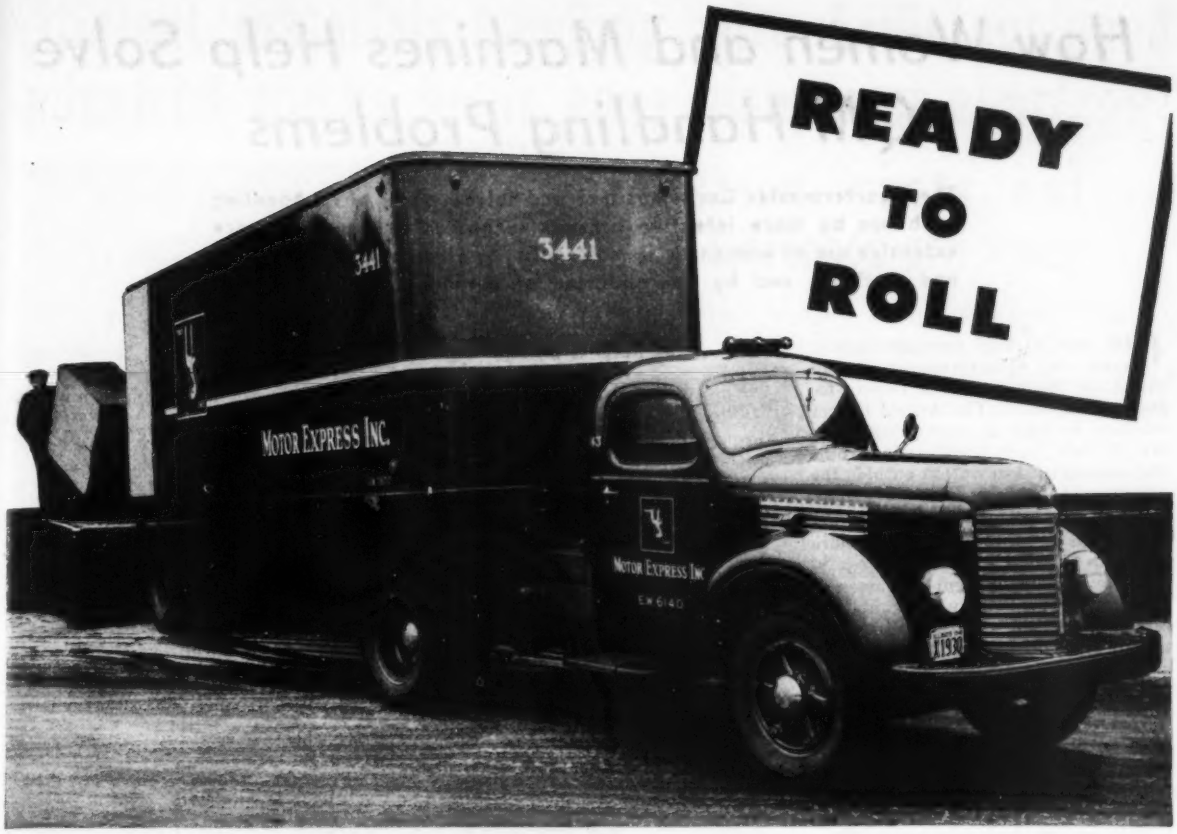
3. The establishment of an Institute of Distribution for study of the broad problems and research into the individual industry problems created when we move out of a national and into worldwide distributive economy.

"TO win the war through production and lose the peace through distribution would be America's greatest tragedy."

To avoid it we must achieve a broader concept of distribution and a better understanding of its essential functions. We must make a coordinated effort to establish basic standards of distribution for individual industries by means of joint committees within broad industry groups, and we must undertake to devise broader and more thorough methods of research.

WE still have too complex and, in many lines, an over-extended middleman organization allowing the interposition of more such agencies than are necessary. This accelerates the pyramiding of distributor margins to the point where their total often adds unreasonably to the price the consumer has to pay.

THE need for a more comprehensive understanding of distribution becomes even more manifest when it is understood that distribution, broadly speaking, embraces among its activities all that series of activities often referred to as marketing, but which are more truly described by the term distribution because they are concerned with the flow of goods from points of production to points of consumption or use.



INTERNATIONAL SERVICE DOES IT!

BEHIND every International Truck on the job today is a sizeable investment in International SERVICE. It's SERVICE that catches little troubles before they become big ones. It's SERVICE that puts the ready to roll O.K. on trucks, whether the job ahead is a cross-country haul or a multi-stop delivery route in town. It's SERVICE that guards the trucking industry's home front.

International branches and dealers take their service obligations seriously. They are set up to do a thorough, over-all job. Their investment in skilled servicemen, special tools and equipment, and Genuine International Truck Parts is your assurance that they are pledged to help you in every way they can.

How Women and Machines Help Solve QM Handling Problems

The Quartermaster Corps has met and solved many of its handling problems by more intensive use of mechanical equipment, more extensive use of women to do men's jobs, by streamlining procedure and methods, and by consolidation of personnel responsibilities.

By REID E. SMITH
Major
Quartermaster Corps

THE most critical shortage experienced in Quartermaster Corps and Army Service Forces Depots today is manpower. The Armed Forces continue to take an increasing number of men from warehousing rolls, and private industry often outbids the government for this class of labor.

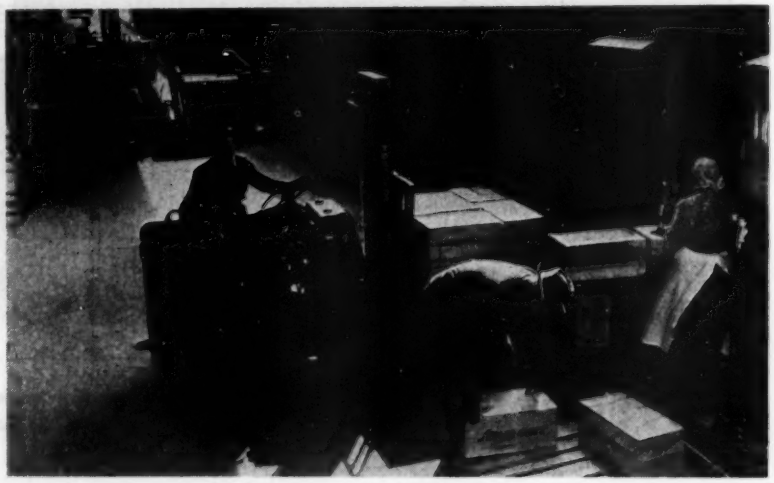
The Quartermaster Corps has met and solved this problem by the more intensive use of mechanical equipment, by the employment of women in jobs formerly filled by men, and by streamlining procedures to eliminate special personnel through consolidation of responsibilities. All of these steps are admirably illustrated in the Utah Army Service Forces Depot, Ogden, Utah.

Importance of Fork Trucks

Approximately two and one-half years ago, The Quartermaster General recognized that there was going to be a shortage of manpower, warehouse space, and railroad cars. He found a common solution for all three problems through development of the fork truck and pallet system.

By handling supplies mechanically, the fork truck does the work of many men, thereby conserving manpower.

ROLLER SKATE CONVEYORS are used to send commodities into cars. Minimum labor is being used: a fork truck operator, who also does the checking, a man to place goods on conveyor, a stenciler and a stacker inside the car.



OBSTACLE COURSE in QM training school for women at Ogden, Utah, must be negotiated satisfactorily before an operator can obtain a license. In foreground, pallets have been placed to simulate shape of box car, the opening being the same as car door. Other operators are practicing both with fork trucks and tractors. Photos by Forney, Utah QM Depot.

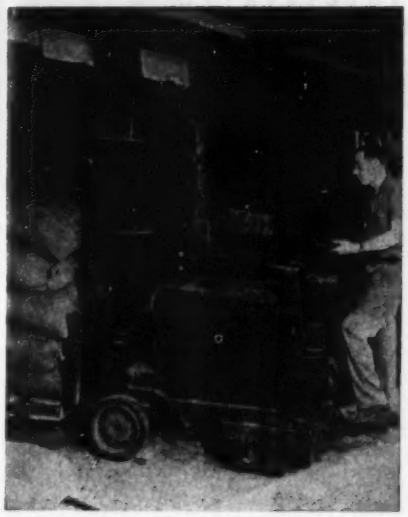
It loads and unloads railroad cars much faster, thereby releasing cars sooner and materially easing the car shortage. It operates in small aisles and stacks goods to the maximum height of the warehouse, thus making the utmost use of all available space.

Use of Women

All Quartermaster Corps Depots are now fully equipped to handle goods mechanically to take full advantage of the economies in manpower, time and space that fork trucks make possible. Further savings are made by using women operators instead of men, since the lifting is entirely mechanical and does not require physical strength.

In connection with the employment of women in warehousing and materials handling positions the Quartermaster Corps has developed special training courses in the use of fork trucks, tractors, checking, loading and unloading, and kindred duties. After a basic training course of 35 hours, women who successfully complete the training are given operators' licenses and assigned to some supply service.

Efficient materials-handling with Exide-equipped industrial trucks helps ease manpower shortage!



Forked truck loading bagged materials into a railroad freight car. One man handles the work of many.

Forked truck stacking palletized unit load. This method doubles storage capacity of warehouses.

Production costs cut through increased efficiency

Efficiency must be today's keynote. Manpower shortages permit no waste motion or space, and fast-moving, battery-powered, industrial trucks mean big savings. They permit faster loading, unloading of materials . . . their use increases the effectiveness of every available man, and permits women to perform tasks formerly considered too heavy for them. Combined with modern methods of palletizing unit loads of almost every material, industrial fork trucks make possible higher stacking, with a consequent increase in vital storage space, and give you many important savings.

HANDLING OF PALLETIZED UNIT LOADS

Although many kinds of modern materials-handling equipment are used in efficient operations of loading and unloading, there are definite advantages to the palletized unit load. Here are some of them, using forked truck pallet and tractor-trailer systems of handling.

1. Handling-time cut 25-75%; particularly in unloading railroad cars and trucks.
2. Volume of damage reduced by elimination of many manual bucket-brigade handling operations.
3. Capacity of warehouses increased through higher tiering of palletized materials.
4. Enables use of less skilled help, including older men and women.
5. Simplifies inventory-taking, sorting, and inspection operations.
6. Reduces accidents, and often prevents them.
7. Makes rodent and vermin control simpler through better housekeeping methods.

The success of the war depends upon speedy movement of men and materials. Standardization of packing methods and materials-handling equipment accelerates the movement of materials at home and on the fighting fronts.

Training Methods

The art of maneuvering fork trucks in small areas is one of the first things taught to beginners. This is done by placing pallet boards in positions to simulate spaces in which trucks normally would operate. Students drive the trucks, backward and forward, through the spaces and are required to replace any pallet that may be knocked down. If a student kills the engine of the machine, she must start it herself. This has a tendency to teach students to be careful and after forming this habit it has been shown that they continue to be careful mechanical equipment operators.

In more advanced lessons pallets are placed to simulate the shape of a box car, with an opening the same size as a door. A loading plate is placed where it would be located in a box car and the operators learn to maneuver in and out of this area both with fork trucks and tractors. In effect, this is an obstacle course which must be negotiated satisfactorily before an operator can obtain a license.

Standardization

In a further move to conserve manpower, Col. Letcher O. Grice, Supply Officer at the Utah Army Service Forces Depot, conducted successful experiments in which fork truck operators also served as checkers, thereby eliminating one checker for each car loaded or unloaded.

This practice works particularly well with subsistence items, which lend themselves better to pallet, fork-truck operations than almost any other commodities. In most warehouses, therefore, subsistence is palletized in its entirety in standardized pallet loads containing the same number of cases, boxes or cartons.

Savings

The possible manpower savings in such a program may be visualized by taking the month of October, 1943, as a typical example. During the month

Circumstances beyond anybody's control, namely the "flu" germ, has broken the continuity of our publication of Matthew W. Potts' "Modern Manual of Materials Handling Equipment."

Harry Johnson, the artist, whose illustrations for Mr. Potts' "Manual" have received such deserved and widespread praise, has been seriously ill. Rather than have an inexperienced man illustrate the January material, which Mr. Potts' had prepared, we decided to postpone until February the next installment of Mr. Potts' "Manual."—The Editor.

Real Savings In Time, Space and Money are made by ROSS Industrial CARRIERS and LIFT TRUCKS

RECORDS of industrial plants, warehouses and terminals throughout the country show that congestions and delays in movement of materials have been greatly reduced by the installation of ROSS Industrial CARRIERS and LIFT TRUCKS. Indoors and out, these mobile, fast-maneuvering machines solve the problem of transporting, spotting and storing a wide variety of materials with maximum efficiency in minimum space—and at lowest possible cost . . . If bottlenecks in your present handling system are responsible for costly delays, let our engineers show you how ROSS Industrial CARRIERS and LIFT TRUCKS can be important factors in solving your problems.

Measuring Air Cargo Flow

Air cargo interests are fumbling around trying to forecast what their volume and flow of traffic may be. The tables and discussion presented here give some indication of the possible volume and the unevenness of the flow. Also they indicate how difficult it is to draw conclusions and make predictions from the figures available.

By JOHN H. FREDERICK
Air Cargo Editor

ONE of the biggest problems facing the airlines, in organizing for air cargo transportation, is to estimate as accurately as possible what is likely to be the volume and directional flow of this traffic. This is not easy, particularly as it is in part bound up with the air cargo rate question, but an attempt to make such a measurement is an important first step. The data in this article is offered as a beginning for a more detailed study.

Every study of traffic flow ever made has shown that the high value manufactured articles flow from east to west and the low value raw materials in the opposite direction. This is natural, because of the economic development of the United States. One of the keys to an understanding of the matter lies in the distribution of our population. Pronounced influences are naturally easily discerned in the movements of goods to centers of great population.

By far the greatest concentration of people, as well as spending power in this country, is in the northeastern part. Over half our population is found north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and east of the Mississippi, the area known as Official or Eastern Territory in railroad palance. This fact is of paramount importance in marketing since the opportunities and possibilities for selling goods are so great in the northeast that the bulk of the country's raw materials naturally gravitate toward that area as a matter of course. There they are converted into manufactured products and that part not consumed within the territory itself finds its way to other sections of the country.

Since most traffic flow studies of the past have been concerned with railroad freight shipments it is necessary to resort to such studies to obtain an over-all picture of traffic flow within the United States.

A good picture of traffic flow, based on rail traffic statistics, is obtained by considering shipments between the territories shown in Chart I of products classified by the Interstate Commerce Commission as "manufactures and miscellaneous." It is in this group of products, now carried by rail, that the traffic will be found most readily changing to air transportation as such a service becomes available. Carload traffic of products other than those of agriculture, animals, mines or forests, the distinctly bulky traffic, was received and shipped into and out of these territories in 1940, as shown in Table 1.

Here we have a very rough picture of the possible merchandise air cargo tonnage originating and terminating in these sections of the country assuming that the greater part of such traffic could and would move by air. That this assumption might be in error is plain when we consider that the above figures include petroleum and its products, which accounts for the large tonnage originating in the southwest (39 per cent of all traffic originating there), a region which is not a general manufacturing area. It will be seen, however, that 68 per cent of the total merchandise traffic originates in the eastern territory and 66 per cent terminates therein.

AMERICAN AIRLINES now forwards your International Air Express shipments from Monterrey or Mexico City to off-line cities by the fastest available means of transportation, or as you direct. ¶ This new service not only steps up speed of your shipments, but simplifies handling and increases efficiency as well. ¶ For pickup, call Railway Express Agency, Air Express Division.

Now, more than ever—mark shipments to or from Mexico:

From Table 1 it can also be seen that two territories originate or ship more potential air cargo traffic than they receive but here again the percentage figure for the southwest is thrown out of line by the inclusion of petroleum. This table does, however, strongly indicate the importance of the east as an originator of potential air cargo. As a receiver of potential air cargo the figures for the east are distorted by the inclusion of petroleum and its products in the same manner that shipments from the southwest are distorted as above mentioned.

When this railroad traffic is classified as to value per ton a better idea of the possible origination and destination territories for potential air cargo may be obtained. It is safe to say that for some time the higher valued manufactured products will be those that go by air. Table 2 shows the net balances of traffic into and out of the several rate territories of products valued above $150 per ton. This eliminates the influence of petroleum and its products.

From Table 2 it will be seen that the traffic most likely to move by air will originate largely in the east which, in 1940, showed 4,805,000 more tons outbound by rail of high value manufactures than inbound. To be sure, some of these commodities such as automobiles, for example, would not be likely to move by air, but just the same this figure is significant.

Still another use may be made of value per ton figures to show that the eastern region is the big potential air shipper. This is shown in Table 3, although in this case the southern figure for value per ton should be qualified by pointing out that its size is accounted for by shipments of cotton piece goods and tobacco, products with a high value per unit of weight. The same table shows the southern, southwestern and far western territories to be big potential receivers of air cargo if we agree that high value traffic will move by that agency.

Air Cargo interests are fumbling around trying to forecast what their volume and flow of traffic may be. The tables and discussion presented here give some indication of the possible volume and the unevenness of the flow from east to west and from west to east. Also they indicate how difficult it is to draw conclusions and make predictions from the figures available.

Unevenness in flow of high grade products by rail is counterbalanced by the flow of products of agriculture, animal products, and products of the mines and forests. Such bulky products offer a future possibility for air cargo but the immediate problem will be to counterbalance the uneven flow of high grade products from the east to other parts of the country. Just how this will be brought about, if it can be accomplished at all, is a big problem the solution of which is not at all clear at this time. Anyone with ideas on the subject is invited to correspond with the writer of this article.

As of March, 1941, the population of cities to which domestic air express tariffs applied was estimated at 41,460,000 with an off-airline population of 90,209,000. These off-airline cities received air express service over the rail lines by the Railway Express Agency to the nearest airline terminal point thence by air to destination. Approximately 30 per cent of all air express shipments were handled through coordinated rail and air service.

The significant fact is that these off-airline shipments were far heavier and produced about 18 per cent more gross revenue per shipment than those moving entirely by air. For example, as recently stated by C. G. Peterson of the Railway Express Agency, the average air revenue for off-airline shipments for April, 1939, was $3.059 against $2.60 average gross revenue for shipment between airline cities.

There is ample reason to believe that if these off-airline points were connected with the trunkline carriers a tremendous increase in air cargo shipments would result therefrom. It is to be expected that most air cargo will originate with or be destined to producers, wholesalers, and retailers. Normally, much volume of air cargo shipments will not be originated by consumers though some consumer purchases from retailers may, under unusual circumstances, be delivered by air shipment.

Table 4 shows that in 1939, the latest date for which such data is available, the greater part of air express shipments were interstate or regional. The principal movement of traffic was from the north and northeastern states to the states of the south and west. The small number of intrastate shipments for each state was no doubt due to the lack of short-haul or feeder airlines having access to the smaller towns and cities.

Comparatively speaking, California was the exception to this condition

the secret of getting FASTEST DELIVERY

Don't wait for "routine" afternoon pickups, when shipping AIR EXPRESS. Get your shipments on the way as soon as they are ready — as early in the day as possible.

That's the secret of getting fastest delivery. Because you avoid possible delay, due to end-of-day congestion when Airline traffic is at its peak.

And to cut costs — AIR EXPRESS shipments should be packed compactly but securely, to obtain the best ratio of size to weight.

A Money-Saving, High-Speed Tool For Every Business

As a result of increased efficiency developed to meet wartime demands, rates have recently been reduced. Shippers nationwide are now saving an average of more than 10% on Air Express charges. And Air Express schedules are based on "hours", not days and weeks — with 3-mile-a-minute service direct to hundreds of U. S. cities and scores of foreign countries.

Outstanding Aviation Developments Cited by CAA Head in Review of '43

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Increased attention to post-war planning featured civil aviation developments in 1943, according to a year-end review issued by Charles I. Stanton, Administrator of Civil Aeronautics.

"We have in aviation a 20 billion dollar industry, employing 2,500,000 people," Mr. Stanton said. "War has made it our leading business, and while we must continue to concentrate on war activities, the Civil Aeronautics Administration believes the time has come to plan for minimizing the inevitable curtailment that peace will bring.

"With proper planning, aviation will come out of the war far bigger than when it entered. We had 25,000 civil aircraft in 1939. Three years after the war we should have 300,000, and by the end of the first post-war decade 500,000."

Airline service to small cities, revolutionary air traffic control devices, and a greatly enlarged airport system are among the post-war possibilities explored by CAA during the year, Mr. Stanton said.

Major activities of the CAA in 1943 necessarily were devoted to projects directly serving the armed forces, he pointed out. These included the $400,000,000 defense airport program; operation of a 35,000-mile airway system on which 85 per cent of the traffic was military; engineering, factory, and flight inspection of military transports and other non-combat planes; and flight training of more than 200,000 men for the Army and Navy.

The CAA airport program during 1943 increased the number of U. S. landing fields suitable for transport aircraft from 660 to 940. The number of such fields at the end of 1940, when the CAA program was launched, was 94. In all categories, the United States now have about 3000 airports, compared with approximately 2500 two years ago.

For the early post-war years, Mr. Stanton estimated a need for double our present number of airports. Reaching such a total of 6000 fields, he said, might cost approximately $800,000,000, an expenditure equal to the entire present investment in U. S. airports. He proposed a Federal aid system of financing such construction, similar to the procedure followed in road building.

The number of pilots holding CAA certificates increased from 110,510 in 1942 to 124,050 in 1943. This increase includes both new military pilots who chose to obtain civilian certificates, and civilians who trained for essential flying jobs such as instructors, or members of the Civil Air Patrol.

Airline activities increased although by the beginning of 1943 the Army had requisitioned about half of the 359 planes in pre-war service. Through fuller loading and more intensive use of the remaining planes, revenue passenger miles rose from 1,398,024,146 in 1942 to 1,505,264,230 in 1943; air express from 40,102,000 lb. in 1942 to 61,366,000 in 1943 and mail-ton miles from 21,066,627 in 1942 to 37,638,833 in 1943.

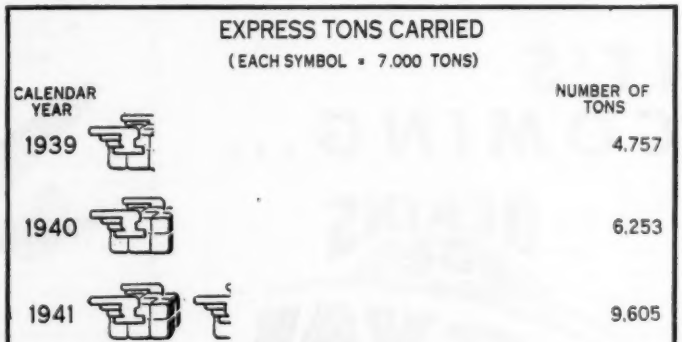
Possibilities of extending airline service to many smaller cities were outlined by Mr. Stanton in testimony at hearings of the Civil Aeronautics Board. Declaring that the short-haul market "represents perhaps the largest chunk of travel business potentially available to our domestic airlines," Mr. Stanton pointed out that only 52 of the 122 cities of 25,000 to 50,000 population have direct air service, and only 58 of the 413 communities in the 10,000 to 25,000 population bracket.

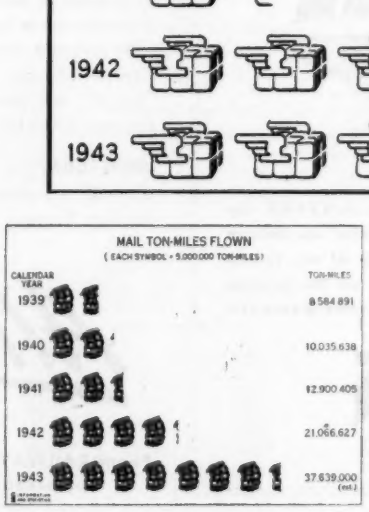
Alaska Airlines Are Consolidated

Formation of the first commercial air service to cover completely the Territory of Alaska was announced last month by R. W. Marshall, New York City, director of Alaska Airlines. The new airline is formed, Mr. Marshall explained, by consolidating several companies covering 63 cities.

American Expands Its Mexican Service

American Airlines has announced that it accepts air express shipments from the United States to 40 cities in 21 States of Mexico. The company said this meant that 23,000 cities in the United States would now have coordinated air express to Mexico.





These Facts Speak for Themselves

D and W's Constructive and Impressive Record as an Advocate of Air Cargo Shown in Bibliography of Major Articles, News Items and Educational Ads Published Since January, 1942

TO commemorate the opening of its third year as an advocate of air cargo, DandW presents a bibliography of all the important information it has published on the subject during the past two years. This is published for several reasons: to fulfill a number of requests that have been made for air cargo data; for the sake of the record; for its public interest, and for the cumulative and indisputable evidence it presents of constructive publishing initiative, foresight and consistency.

As we have previously stated, our reason for stressing the importance of air cargo is simple. We believe in it. We believe it is likely to revolutionize the whole economic structure of modern civilization. That is why we have been urging industry generally, and shippers in particular, to prepare for major changes in post-war distribution. It is our hope that our insistence on the growing importance of air transportation will be instrumental in helping to prevent many shippers, handlers, warehousemen and other distributors from making the mistake of underestimating air cargo. It is our hope also that we may be instrumental in bringing about closer coordination among various industries upon which the progress of air cargo depends.

We believe that our readers should be given reliable information in regard to the rapid development of this new medium of distribution, so that they may be prepared to solve the distribution problems that will arise after the war. This we have done as the record proves. We shall continue to do so as long as there is a need for it. Judging by the comments we have received, most of our readers favor vigorous continuation of this policy.

Both they and we believe it is an integral part of our job, particularly because DandW is a publication in which shipper, carrier, receiver, warehouseman and equipment manufacturer meet on common ground to obtain and exchange ideas and suggestions for more efficient and economical distribution of raw materials and finished products of all kinds.

But that is not all. It is only a part of what DandW is doing and will continue to do to help crystallize opinion among industrial leaders with respect to air cargo and various developments related thereto. Air cargo is of concern to everybody interested in distribution. Therefore, DandW will continue to publish its series of educational advertisements monthly in Standard Rate and Data Service, and will continue mailing reprints every month to the industrial executives who have received them in the past and who request them in the future.

How Air Cargo Will Affect

Four Basic Factors in Distribution

No. 4—Distance No Longer a Factor

By GEORGE F. BAUER
International Traffic Analyst
Air Cargo, Inc.

Conquest of distance in terms of time is of great benefit in world trade. It allows appraisal of numerous foreign markets in terms of domestic trade. The new time economy being introduced by the airplane will make for many practices that will be improvements in many lines of business.

This is the last of four articles by Mr. Bauer on the main factors that will determine whether a commodity can be transported by plane to the advantage both of producer and dealer. There are four such factors: time, value, weight and distance.

DISTANCE is the remaining factor which, like time, value and weight, influences the suitability of a product for air transport.

The distance, or miles, that a shipper and receiver of goods are separated may be viewed from two angles in connection with air transport. The longer the distance, the greater the operating cost of a 'plane. Fuel cost naturally adds up with every mile that a 'plane flies. The charge to a shipper has to include recognition of the fact that the greater the distance a package has to be flown, the greater will have to be the provision for flying costs.

On the other hand, the greater the distance, the greater would be the time normally required by surface carriers to cover it and, consequenly, the greater the benefits are in time economy by the use of airplanes.

Will Multiply Transactions

The greatest benefit to the user of air transport in connection with long distances, is ability to multiply transactions without search for additional capital in his establishment. He is enabled to complete the cycle of sales, delivery and payment in one-sixth of the time previously required when long distances separated the producer from the dealer.

Conquest of distance in terms of time is of great benefit in world trade as it allows appraisal of numerous foreign markets in terms of domestic trade.

Far-Reaching in Scope

Consequently the combination of distance, time, value and weight as linked with air transport will warrant consideration by all engaged in distribution of goods in the future. The new time economy being introduced with the airplane will make for many practices that will be improvements in many lines of business.

Certain domestic businesses to be up-to-date will adopt policies extending beyond the borders of the United States.

Producers with even limited facilities can realize a new ability to contact retail outlets in remotest parts of the world and arrange their advertising, sales and distribution programs accordingly.

Capital and Inventories

Capital requirements can probably be adjusted downward as less need may develop in certain industries to keep on hand stocks of their products in as large quantities as heretofore.

Current inventories providing for three months' supplies of each product made by a firm, can be decreased perhaps, because of better ability to coordinate demand and production in the air age, to a reserve supply of one month. Economies would thereby be effected in capital tied up in goods in process, rental of space for stocking of products, damage to these goods and expenses of personnel to control actual inventories to avoid losses.

Distributors and wholesalers are likely to become a more intensive part in the actual sales efforts of retailers and not so likely to be handicapped by the tasks of carrying the financial burdens incidental to providing large depots of stocks of goods on which retailers can draw. It will be more to advantage of the larger distributors and smaller dealers to join efforts in the more remunerative work of sales.

Changes Inevitable

"Internationalized domestic business" can be speeded up. Not only will it be possible to "air express" all samples of goods offered for sale to dealers in far away places within a fraction of the former time requirement, but it will also be feasible by return air mail to accept the offer and provide letters of credit on which producers can act promptly and thus assure actual delivery of goods to dealers all within a few days after the initial step has been taken in the transaction.

Changes may be inevitable in various phases of distribution. Adaptation to the new time economy should prove well-worth while for many enterprises that render distribution services.

Warehousing

Warehousing, for instance, may be called upon to render a new service. It may need to provide a link with a new type of merchandizing likely to come with the air age.

In many communities warehousing facilities may become necessary to store small quantities of a large variety of products on which the local retailer can draw. It will be less a matter of bulk storage of one or relatively few commodities in warehouses but rather storage of small quantities of many varied products. The stock per item can be kept low by the warehouse opertor and yet at a right level from the viewpoint of local merchants, because replenishment by air express in small quantities will be quickly possible.

Warehousing then, in addition to the services it renders for bulky, heavy and inexpensive products, can provide another important facility to local merchants who handle expensive products or goods which have an emergency or service element.

Broader Opportunities

The air age while making certain changes possible in all functions of distribution, is likely to afford opportunities more numerous than any it may eliminate. Analysis of each service of distribution in light of this new time economy should reveal some very interesting possibilities worthy of development.

Moreover, other forms of transportation, whether rail, water or highway, will find that the increased goods made available by airplane in the smaller communities of the world will automatically expand demand for the raw materials required in manufacture of the finished goods and, thereby, will provide them with more cargo than they would have without the airplane; for aviation will extend distribution into areas that have been unreachable economically for many products in the past.

War's Weight on Transportation May Shift to Pacific Coast in '44

Rail, truck and air transportation will be called on to share a heavy burden. Trucks handicapped by scarce parts and gas and tire restrictions. Rails need new equipment and more manpower. Airlines are overworked and undermanned. Warehouses are crowded and faced with many difficulties.

By ELSA GIDLOW

o o o

"Army reports trucks in far west moved 16 times as much freight in '42 as in '41, and '43 load will double '42 volume. . . . Pacific Coast ports now handle 37 per cent of the nation's exports against 12 per cent in '42. Seventeen aircraft Coast companies awarded over 22,011 millions in government contracts. . . . Southern Pacific Railroad urgently needs 7,500 more employees immediately. . . . Eleven million dollar rail storage yard being built at Auburn, Wash. (population, 4,211). . . . Santa Fe traffic in California 100 per cent heavier than in previous peak year of '29. . . ." These factual headlines hint at the staggering burden which has been thrust upon the far western transportation system."

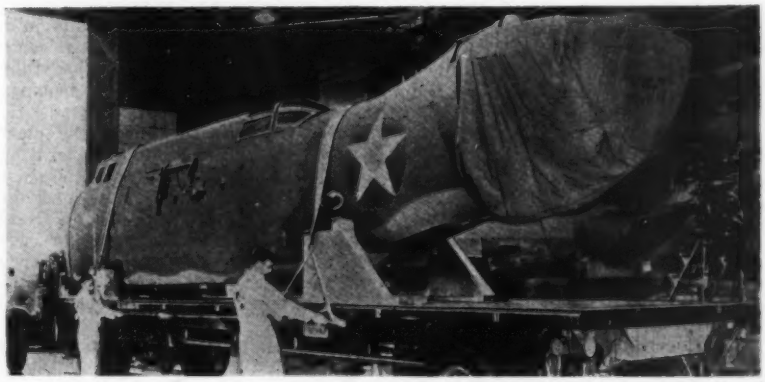
THE quotation above is from the opening paragraph of a report on the West Coast's transportation problems, recently completed by Raymond Reeves, business consultant, U. S. Department of Commerce, at San Francisco. The survey covers California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Idaho, most of Arizona, as well as Alaska and Hawaii.

Echoing a dread that is in the mind of everyone in the transportation field, Mr. Reeves comments: "Overhanging far western transportation is an ominous threat, expansion of the South Pacific war, which could so increase the load on carriers as to disrupt the entire economy of the region."

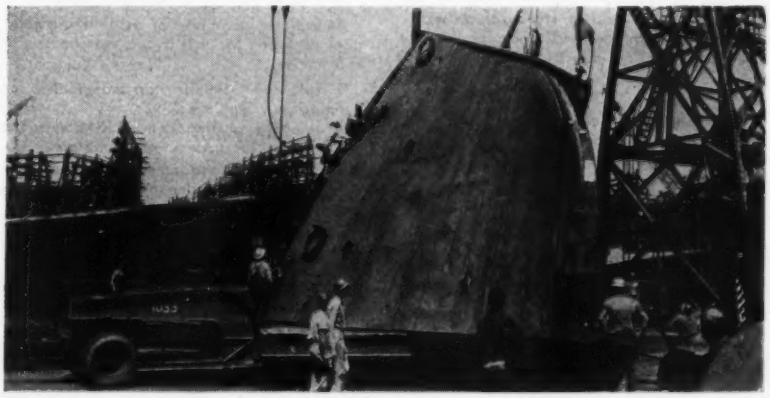
All political and military signs point to this "ominous threat" being realized in 1944 and transportation leaders, port authorities, warehouse operators, have been holding and no doubt will continue to hold meetings on how the situation is to be met successfully; for the far west has a transportation and a warehousing problem of serious proportions, which will become worse if demands upon them increase materially.

Hoping to anticipate this period of tightened transportation businessmen here have tried to "stockpile against transit delays," but have been frustrated by "merchandise shortages, lack of vacant warehousing space, and inventory restrictions." While foodstuffs and other agricultural products move east with little trouble, sometimes with 25 per cent of the cars in a train empty, "westbound trains groan under capacity loads," and time of receiving merchandise from eastern centers has doubled. "Freight in the western district was 87 per cent greater in 1942 than in 1937; 1943 figures will run considerably higher; and no one can guess what 1944 requirements will be.

MOTOR TRANSPORTATION has made it possible for war production to be spread to every cross-road in the land. This huge Fruehauf trailer, loaded with the fuselage of a patrol bomber at a West Coast aircraft plant, is ready to carry it to its next step in the production line, which makes the trailer virtually an assembly line on wheels.



TO SPEED SHIPBUILDING the California Shipbuilding Corp. uses heavy-duty trailers to move bulky, prefabricated sub-assemblies from various parts of the plant area to the hull of the ship. Through the use of trailers production has been stepped up from 1500 to 2,000 tons a day.



Rail, air and truck transportation will be called on to share a heavy burden; and trucking will be handicapped by scarce parts and tires, a gasoline shortage, and an even more difficult manpower shortage than air and rails are having to meet.

No Coast Shipping

So far, Mr. Reeves says, "there can be no adequate summary of the accomplishments of far western carriers. It has been so remarkable it would have been unbelievable even a year ago. Closing of the Panama Canal and withdrawal of coastwise steamers placed a tremendous burden on the western railroads. That burden has been successfully met. The tenuous capacity of north-south rail connections in this area were severely faced by the withdrawal of coastwise vessels. This situation makes it virtually impossible to use the capacity of the Pacific Northwest railroads to relieve the loads being borne by the Arizona-Southern California lines. Nevertheless, considering the volume of tonnage moving in this direction, the instances of delays are relatively minor." In this North-South coastal movement trucks have done a magnificent and valuable job.

Railroads

The rails have had to haul westward all the steel, all the equipment required by the great new shipbuilding industries that are accounting for over half of the deadweight tonnage produced, and vast amounts of materials needed by the expanded aircraft and other war industries on the Pacific Coast. With the realistic cooperation of ODT and ICC, and aided by their own greatly increased efficiency and improved utilization of equipment and manpower, the railroads have done an exceptional job.

But they are being well paid for it. One road, showed a 78 per cent increase in total net operating income. Unless unprecedented demands are suddenly made upon them, it is believed the rails will be able to continue doing a good job if they can get the additional man and womanpower they require; and if they can get much-needed heavy-duty diesel freight locomotives and tractors to haul loads over the mountain passes, and to handle yard movements.

Motor Carriers

It's the trucking industry that has the problems. These will multiply if transportation demands on the west coast increase. The U. S. Department of Commerce's business consultant says: "No other section of the nation is so dependent upon trucks as the far west. In California alone, about two-thirds of all freight traffic moves by truck. In Nevada, for example, more than 265 communities containing over half the population of the state are dependent upon truck transportation. Rural and farm communities simply can not exist if our truck transportation loses a large part of its effective force."

The trucking industry on the west coast has been doing the biggest job in its history. Experts predicted it would break down. But it hasn't broken down. Experts said it couldn't move the peak agricultural crops this year. It moved them. Experts are now saying it will not be able to stand up under greatly accelerated demands if war opens up on a larger scale in the Pacific. But it will stand up, somehow. Motor carriers feel that they, unlike the railroads, are not being well paid for the job they are doing.

Trucking Assns. Name Air Cargo Committee

The American Trucking Assns., Inc., has named a special air cargo committee which will meet with Air Cargo, Inc., to study the future of motaircargo. The chairman is Chester G. Moore of Chicago, chairman of the board, Central Motor Freight Assn.

Air Cargo Inc., is a research organization set up cooperatively by the airlines. Its headquarters is in New York City. The home office of ATA is at Washington, D. C.

Coordination between motor carriers and the airlines has long been advocated by D and W, notably in its October, 1943, issue when it advanced a three-fold argument why air and trucking associations should undertake coordination of their industries now for more efficient and economical post-war distribution.

Low Earnings

Mr. Reeves touches on this problem in his report where he cites the three big handicaps confronting trucking as (1) a crisis in manpower; (2) low earnings; (3) equipment deterioration and shortage.

"In railroad transportation, fixed charges comprise the bulk of the cost of handling traffic. Hence any boom in volume usually results in a disproportionate increase in net earnings. This is not true in the truck business. War has brought no bonanza to trucking concerns. Instead, restrictions in speed and other factors have brought about high operating costs. There has been a large increase in the low profit minimum package business which trucks have had to handle. Concurrently, there has been a marked decrease in the efficiency of employee performance, as well as a lowered efficiency in the mechanical performance of vehicles (due to old age, makeshift repairs, etc.). This sort of thing eats into profits rapidly and can go on indefinitely. Truckers' earnings have taken a double beating from the higher wages which must be paid while operating under rates and charges often based on pre-war conditions."

Other Problems

Manpower difficulties to be overcome in the trucking industry are greater than those which confront rail transportation; for in heavy truck movements it is not always practicable to make added use of women, older men, or army rejects.

What of parts and tires? This problem is real and pressing. Roy B. Thompson, secretary-manager, Truck Owners' Assn. of California, says: "There has been developing an extreme shortage of large size truck tires. The majority of operators have not yet felt the pinch but it is evident that they will in the very near future." Although Washington agencies have advised the West coast that the parts situation is going to improve, Thompson says: "many operators are still having difficulties."

E. A. Hills, in charge of public relations for TOAC, in the operators' official paper "Go," quotes Lt. Gen. Delos Emmons, commanding general, Western Defense Command, as saying "a major transportation crisis and a potential gasoline shortage of drastic proportions" faces the west.

'No Substitute for Trucks'

No wonder Mr. Reeves said that the problems of the trucking industry must be "met realistically, and soon, for there is no substitute for trucks in the Far West. The railroads could not take over the tonnage now being handled by trucks without disaster to themselves.

Eastman, Suggesting New Manpower Plan, Calls Warehouses Commodity Reservoirs

Joseph B. Eastman, director, ODT, has announced an 11-point manpower program for the warehousing industry, stating that "warehouses are commodity reservoirs for the entire transportation industry, and any breakdown of warehouse service must be avoided at all costs."

The 11-point program proposes that, in co-operation with appropriate governmental agencies, warehouse managements and employe groups:

1. Prepare and file replacement schedules with selective service authorities.
2. Establish full wartime work week.
3. Utilize to fullest degree existing labor forces within the community, including women and minority groups.
4. Enlist aid of U. S. Employment Service for recruiting new workers.
5. Recruit groups of part-time workers.
6. Explore possibility of establishing joint pool of labor for use by all warehouses in community.
7. Establish definite arrangements for training new employes.
8. Improve working conditions and make every effort to sustain worker morale.
9. Establish management-labor committees to improve service and conserve manpower.
10. Institute changes in service requirements or procedures which will reduce labor needs.
11. In areas where manpower priorities systems are in effect, utilize established procedures to obtain necessary labor.

WPB Allots Orders For Freight Trailers

Assignments to manufacture 25,045 general freight truck trailers, under the first phase of the 1944 civilian transport replacement program, prorated among 88 manufacturers, based on capacity, by the War Production Board.

Assignments for 12,250 additional trailers to be built under the program will be made later.

Recent assignments of more than 1000 trailer units include: Fruehauf Trailer Co., 11,600; Trailer Co. of America, 3114; Highway Trailer Co., 1209; Hobbs Manufacturing Co., 1055; Keystone Trailer & Equipment Co., 1015.

Conservation Essential For '44, Bauman Says

Addressing a gathering of motor truck owners and operators at a dinner meeting at Los Angeles recently, J. N. Bauman, vice-president, White Motor Co., declared that unless strict conservation methods are invoked by truck operators, the United States in 1944 will be faced with drastic curtailment of its motor transportation with crippling effects on the production and distribution of essential war materials.

Mr. Bauman declared that despite the action by the WPB in providing 81,000 new trucks to be built in 1944 for allotment to civilian users, the situation is still critical and calls for cooperation of every truck owner in keeping his truck in service as long as possible.

"The situation regarding raw materials and component parts is such that the big majority of this 81,000 cannot be produced until the second half of 1944," Mr. Bauman said. Trucks have been wearing out at the rate of 1000 a day since Pearl Harbor, he said, for which reason better over-all conservation methods and not the allotment of 81,000 new trucks for 1944 continues to be the answer for keeping trucks in operation. (Herr)

Good News

Good news for 1944 is contained in the War Production Board's announcement that operators of fleets of 25 or more medium or heavy trucks will be able to buy engines, transmission assemblies and rear axle assemblies without turning in a similar used part or filing a certificate swearing that the old part cannot be rebuilt or reconditioned.

Higher priorities also will be allowed for the manufacture of safety accessories.

According to officials, it is believed that the lid has now virtually been removed from replacement parts schedules.

300 Million Tons of Freight Hauled By Trucks in '43, Staniford Says

America's highway transportation system established an all-time high in hauling nearly 300,000,000 tons of freight in 1943 despite severe handicaps, and in doing so took up much of the slack in railroad facilities, according to F. F. Staniford, president, Mack International Motor Truck Corp.

Compared with the last war, when in 1918 America's transportation system collapsed and the federal government took over the railroads and imposed immediate freight embargoes, the present conflict finds our transportation system still holding up under the strain. A reason for this, Mr. Staniford says, is that railroads are moving more freight with less equipment than in the last war. But the main reason is that our country has close to 5,000,000 trucks on the job today compared to 350,000 in 1918.

These 5,000,000 trucks are averaging 10,000 miles annually for a grand total of 50 billion miles per year. In rolling that distance in 1942 they hauled 60 billion ton-miles of freight, and passed that mark in 1943. This record haul was carried over 300,000 miles of inter-city hard roads as compared to approximately 5,000 miles of inter-city hard roads in 1918.

While keeping vital war materials and civilian commodities moving, the small percentage of for-hire trucks of the country in 1943 more than doubled the tonnage they hauled in an average taken of the years 1938 to 1940 inclusive. They carried close to 300 million tons of freight in 1943 and helped service the 43 per cent of American communities that are totally dependent on highway transportation, according to the Mack executive.

Even while our on-rubber transportation system set a new record, shortages of parts and new equipment cut into the volume of freight the ODT had estimated motor carriers would haul in the latter half of 1943, Mr. Staniford said.

Auto Industry's War Work Record Passed Total of $8 Billions in 1943

The automotive industry's ever-swelling river of war production, amounted to $8,840,000,000 in 1943, according to George Romney, managing director, Automotive Council for War Production. Details are charted in the 1943 edition of "Automobile Facts and Figures," yearbook of the Automobile Mfrs. Assn., issued last month.

"The annual production rate in the industry is now double the output of civilian goods in the best peacetime year," the publication says, "and the peak has not yet been reached."

Graphically showing how the industry has stepped up its deliveries to the United Nations, the yearbook compares the annual rate of production achieved in the first month after Pearl Harbor, of $1,984,000,000 with the annual rate of $8,400,000,000 achieved in 1943.

Figures on motor truck use point out that 34 of the largest cities in the nation, including Atlanta, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis and Washington, D. C., received all their milk by motor truck. Some 56 per cent of all livestock receipts at stockyards are attributed to truck transport. Minnesota, South Dakota and Missouri counties showed that small business firms ship nearly half their freight over the highways in motor trucks. Special taxes levied on motor trucks averaged $117 a vehicle last year, providing more than half a billion dollars in revenue.

PERMALUX

*is "The Ultimate in Decalcomania"

That's a wide range in the field of transportation. Yet, Permalux is used wherever extra durability is required. Made with DuPont "Dulux," this all-weather decalcomania is actually outwearing the finishes upon which it is applied. Water mounted, it requires no protective varnish, and can be cleaned with any standard compound. Permalux remains flexible almost indefinitely. Hence, it can be purchased in larger quantities at lower cost for it does not tend to dry out and become brittle. Fleet owners—large and small—regard Permalux "Kolorfilm" as the best buy in decalcomania. If you are interested in cutting decoration costs, write for detailed information.

"THE SIGN OF PERMANENT IDENTITY"

The Importance of Traffic Management

The skill and training of traffic managers, always important, have never been as essential as now. They have been a bulwark in the maintenance of wartime transportation. When peace returns the need of trained traffic managers will be greater than ever to help solve new competitive conditions that will confront industrial and mercantile firms.

IT is vitally important to have well-trained and competent persons in responsible positions in the various transportation agencies in peacetime and particularly in time of war. It is just as important to have the same type of persons in industrial plants directing the transportation of goods produced by these plants both during peace and war.

Traffic managers, and key members of their staffs in industries vital to the conduct of war, are fitted by temperament, training, and experience to perform essential liaison services between carriers, industries and government in the transportation of materials of war. Their skill and training, while always important, have never been as essential as now. They are in a position to secure the best possible use of our transportation facilities, and to conserve them, especially during the emergency created by war.

Traffic Managers Necessary

Traffic managers are trained and experienced in the application to transportation, of the Interstate Commerce Act, various state regulatory acts, the United States Maritime Act and acts supplementary thereto; and in the interpretation and application of decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, of state commissions and of the courts to matters within their provinces.

Their skill in applying these acts and decisions to physical transportation is invaluable to secure the most economical use of freight services and freight equipment available thereunder. By intelligent interpretation and use of freight tariffs and classifications, also the ODT, OPA and WPB orders governing various services, the industrial traffic manager can produce transportation benefits for the country as a whole.

Functions Performed

These industrial traffic managers, members of the profession of traffic management, are serving a vital war need during these times and a vital commercial need in normal times by the judicious selection of proper routes for shipments; by skillful construction and use of freight rates; by proper packing and stowage of freight; by consolidation of orders and deliveries to make one shipment do the work of several; by properly preparing cars for shipment and cleaning them after inbound freight has been removed; by expediting and tracing of shipments; by careful preparation of goods for shipment to avoid loss and damage; by efficient management of internal plant transportation facilities, motor vehicles, private cars, and marine facilities, and in many other special ways peculiar to their industries.

To carry out these various functions, the industrial traffic manager must be thoroughly familiar with the physical handling of freight; with the technicalities and rules of the classification of freight, rate and tariff construction, express and parcel post, demurrage, storage, reconsigning, stowage in transit, transit arrangements, warehousing, exporting and importing of goods, and the handling of claims for overcharge, loss or damage. The traffic manager must be familiar with these various phases of his duties as they apply to rail, motor truck, water and air transportation.

Knowledge Required

To be acquainted with all these requirements and successfully administer them, the traffic manager of necessity must have a thorough knowledge of transportation law and business economics, and a full understanding of the laws that affect contracts, agency, bailment, carriers, damages, insurance and sales. Aside from his special and general education, he must have had a great amount of practical experience gained through years of actual service in the field of transportation.

The ICC for years has recognized the importance of traffic managers. Permission to practice at its bar in the litigation of freight rate and many other types of cases, has long been granted to the traffic manager. In fact, the ICC has frequently commented favorably on the aid it has received from traffic managers in the trial of cases that come before it for adjudication.

Drafted by Government

The services of expert traffic managers in the employ of industrial concerns, carriers and government agencies have been drafted by the ODT to organize, direct and coordinate transportation activities in wartime. Some of these men have been placed in administrative positions in the headquarters organization of ODT in Washington, others have been assigned to regional branches of ODT, while still others have continued in their normal employment and are serving as members of advisory committees, or assisting other governmental agencies concerned with transportation problems. The Army and Navy not only recognize the value of traffic men and has asked many of them to volunteer their services.

A man prominent in the field of transportation said recently: "There is no doubt that the conservation of equipment initiated by ODT orders has been a bulwark in the maintenance of efficient wartime transportation. Such orders could not have originated in the minds of ordinary laymen or other professional men. They had to be prepared by trained traffic men. The proper interpretation and full compliance with these orders also required practical experience and technical training of traffic-minded individuals. It is this kind of cooperation that is accomplishing the most magnificent transportation job in history. These results would not have materialized without the initiative and foresight of expert traffic men."

In War and Peace

The global scope of the present war has emphasized the importance of transportation. It has played a vital role in every war, but never before has so much been required in order that our production and deliveries of all types of vital goods would not be "too little or too late." This has required adequate facilities of transportation, managed by carrier and industrial traffic men experienced in and devoted to their duties, not only in the operation of their own trans-

Army to Sell Trucks For Civilian Use

Several thousand non-combat army vehicles, most of them trucks, will be released in the near future to relieve shortages of motor vehicles and spare parts for essential civilian uses, the War Department has announced.

All the vehicles were manufactured in 1940 or earlier, and the department said the army could keep them in serviceable condition only by drawing heavily on commercial dealers' stocks of spare parts which are needed to service commercial fleets. The vehicles will be disposed of through the Treasury Department's procurement division.

Critical Months Ahead Eastman Declares

Joseph B. Eastman, director, ODT, recently declared that failure of tire and truck replacements to meet 1944 requirements may upset the delicate balance of the wartime transportation system and cause serious delays in the movement of war goods.

The next few months will be the most critical transportation period of the war, he said, as increasing quantities of goods and men are routed through the nation's seaports from interior points.

By the middle of 1944, he said, trucks and buses will be depending on synthetic rubber tires. Mr. Eastman indicated severer rationing of truck tires may be necessary, due to abnormal military demand, adding that the prospects for construction of new commercial vehicles in the first half of 1944 are far from bright.

Conservation

Acting on a request of Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Mayor Tobin of Boston, has appointed a committee to work out a program for the conservation of critical resources by industries, stores and individual citizens. The program is aimed at saving transportation, fuel, household gas, electricity, telephone communication and water as most essential.

The committee comprises: John J. Walsh, executive director, Boston Public Safety Committee; Thomas H. Carens, vice-president, Boston Edison Co.; William J. Sheehan, Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates; Daniel Bloomfield, Retail Board of Trade and director Boston Conference on Distribution, and William H. Day, Transportation Bureau, Boston Chamber of Commerce. Truman Committee Urges More Replacements

A warning that the country's transportation system could not maintain its unprecedented war pace without prompt and extensive replacements of many types of equipment was given to the Senate last month by the special (Truman) committee investigating the war program.

Failure to provide adequate stocks of new locomotives, freight and passenger cars, rails, trucks, buses and tires, it contended, would invite the risk of a breakdown. Some steps already were being taken in the direction of making replacements, the committee found, but it called for greater efforts in providing transportation facilities required to keep materials moving into war production.

Work of Freighters on Great Lakes In '43 'Bordered on Miraculous'

CLEVELAND, O. — Accomplishments of the freighters on the Great Lakes during the navigation season of 1943 "very near bordered on the miraculous," Joseph B. Eastman, director, ODT, said in a telegram of congratulations to vessel operators and seamen.

The Lake Superior Iron Ore Assn. reported the official 1943 ore movement to total 84,404,852 gross tons. A number of ships which shared in the ore movement were active after Dec. 10 in bringing down from the Northwest and Canadian prairies a tremendous amount of grain for export and for feed in the United States.

The ore movement total was 7,671,929 gross tons, or 8.33 per cent, less than the 92,076,781 tons of the 1942 season when the ships started nearly a month earlier and had less fog and adverse weather. Practically all ore shipped after Nov. 8 this year had to be steamed to thaw it for loading.

Totals for other years are: 1941, 80,116,360; 1940, 63,712,982; 1939, 45,073,052; 1938, 19,263,011; 1937, 62,598,836; 1936, 44,822,023; 1935, 28,362,368; 1934, 22,249,600; 1933, 21,623,898, and 1932, 3,567,985. (Kline)

1943 Figures

Total ton-miles of revenue freight carried in 1943 on the inland waterways, including the Great Lakes and the intra-coastal waterways, according to present estimates, exceed the 1939 ton-mile figure by 64 per cent, according to Joseph B. Eastman, director, Office of Defense Transportation.

Mr. Eastman recently stated that a total of 96,250,000,000 ton-miles of revenue wreight was carried on the inland waterways of the United States in 1939, that the corresponding total for 1942 was 148,565,000,000 ton-miles, representing an increase of 54.4 per cent, and that the estimated total for 1943 was 157,903,000,000 ton-miles.

"Of course the great item in this total was the movement of iron ore on the Great Lakes," he said. "There is no transportation movement in the country which is more vital to the whole war effort, and the ore carriers have done an outstanding piece of work in bringing it to totals far beyond any previous records. In 1943 they will not be able to equal the extraordinary record of 1942; but this is because of the very late opening of the navigation season last year."

Ship Construction Exceeds Goal

The 24,000,000-ton goal of new ship construction set for the two years ending Dec. 31, 1943, already has been exceeded by a substantial margin, Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, USN, vice chairman, U. S. Maritime Commission, disclosed in an address before the University Club, New York, recently. The tonnage already delivered as of the end of Nov., '43, Admiral Vickery said, exceed 25,284,387 deadweight tons.

Appropriation Voted For Milwaukee Harbor

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Milwaukee harbor has been recommended for a $110,000 maintenance appropriation by the house rivers and harbors committee. Dredging of the harbor and the river to required depths is included in maintenance.

Appropriations recommended by the committee for other Wisconsin harbors, all for maintenance, were: Green Bay, $56,000; Ashland, $24,000, and Racine, $47,000. Across the lake, these appropriations were recommended: St. Joseph, $47,000; Grand Haven and Grand River, $150,000, and Manistee, $147,000.

Also approved by the committee was an appropriation of $33,000 to repair seepage and drainage damage.

Wooden Barge Fleet To Be Written Off

The 269 wooden barges built under the ODT barge construction program, at a cost of approximately $22,000,000, have proved impractical, ODT sources stated recently, indicating that the wooden barges might as well "be written off as one of the costs of the war." At present the majority of the barges are tied up on the Gulf Coast.

These wooden craft were constructed as part of the overall barge program of ODT. They were built when there was considerable pressure for tankers to carry oil from Gulf ports up the Mississippi and from the Gulf coast of Texas over to Florida. Need for a fleet of such barges has been lessened by the improved petroleum transportation situation, resulting, among other things, from the oil pipe line from Texas to the East.

Canada to Build Ore Loading Dock

PORT ARTHUR, ONT.—The Dominion government will provide the funds and the Canadian National Railways will build an ore-loading dock here costing between two and three million dollars to handle iron ore from the Steep Rock mine, near here, it was announced recently.

The mine is owned by a company headed by Cyrus Eaton of Cleveland. Construction work on the dock will be speeded, according to C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.

U. S. Must Keep Its Ships After War, President of Marine Institute Warns

A warning against "maudlin persons" who believe the United States should indiscriminately share its tonnage in the postwar period, was made recently by Frank J. Taylor, president, American Merchant Marine Institute, in an address before the Propeller Club.

Mr. Taylor declared that the United States should plan to carry at least 50 per cent of its shipping in American vessels after the war.

"I cannot follow the reasoning of those who think the United States should be a maritime nation only in time of war and should be content with a minor ranking in times of peace," said Mr. Taylor. "The war should have convinced the country of its dependence upon ships, both for defense and supplies."

Mr. Taylor favors international collaboration, but he said the United States should not again have "the kind of big-heartedness which let our merchant marine fall into the position of a fifth-rate power in 1937."

The American merchant marine can be counted upon to employ millions, if given encouragement, Mr. Taylor said, pointing out that export trade would be a factor in increasing national prosperity after the war.

Shortage of Shipping Containers

For the remainder of the war, demands for fibre shipping containers are expected to exceed the productive capacity of the industry.

TODAY many industries are asking: "Shall we be able to secure sufficient shipping containers to send our goods to market?"

The ability of various industries to move some of their products may depend upon their individual ability to develop a re-use program for their shipping containers.

At present there is a very definite shortage of fibre shipping cases. With the single exception of 1941, demands upon fibre container production are the greatest in history, but this year's manpower shortage was not a factor in 1941.

According to Fibre Section, Container Division, WPB, which deals with the problems of fibre shipping cases for all types of products, the present shortage is due to many contributing factors. The most common complaints are manpower and the production of wood pulp.

In addition to the heavy legitimate needs, a considerable extra burden has been placed on the pulp industry due to the effort of many buyers to protect themselves for the future even though their inventories now are reasonably adequate. This practice simply aggravates the situation.

Of necessity, many people have had to convert from the use of such materials as steel, tin, wood, metal and glass which has created an unprecedented demand for fibre. Paper was at the bottom of the list of materials that could be used, and when the supply became critical there was no substitute to fall back on.

When a steel container is replaced by a wooden container it may not seem to involve paper, but it does. The same facilities required to produce wood for wooden boxes are also required to produce pulpwood for the manufacture of paper. The labor and the transportation facilities required to produce lumber compete with the same facilities required for the production of pulpwood. When the wooden container demands exceed the supply the most logical substitute becomes a fibre container. It is, therefore, obvious that the conversion from containers of critical materials, both directly and indirectly, increases the drain on paper containers, paper, and paper-board production. Today thousands of tons of paper are being used as a direct substitute for steel.

Another important element in the consumption of paper is the amount needed for the military overseas operations. The fibre containers have to withstand heavy punishment and abuse. That means from two to four times as much paper has to go into each overseas container.

Carload Rate Change Opposed in Northwest

Shippers in Portland, Seattle and Tacoma do not want any change made in the basis of charge for mixed carload freight. A change has been requested by the Traffic League, Illinois Division, asking for "modernization" to permit loading of any number of commodities in a car at carload rates. At present, mixed carloads of freight are charged at the highest rates applicable to any commodity in the car. Tacoma Chamber of Commerc followed the examples of the two other Northwest cities' shippers and transportation men in opposing the change. (Gidlow)

Gain of 5% in Rail Freight Traffic Predicted as Likely for '44

Railroads in '43 hauled 62% more freight than in record year of '29, and 78% more than in '18, peak year of last war. Nearly 83 million tons of army freight was hauled by railroads last year, four and one-half times more than was moved by rail during entire period of last war. Cooperation of shippers made '43 records possible, railroad official states.

RAILROAD freight traffic in 1944 will increase between two and five per cent over 1943, and railroad passenger business will go up between 10 and 20 per cent, M. J. Gormley, executive assistant, Assn. of American Railroads, predicted last month at Birmingham, Ala., before the Southeast Shippers Advisory Board.

If traffic mounts at this rate, Mr. Gormley declared, the railroads in '44 will be called upon to handle about 125 per cent more freight traffic than they did in 1939, the year war broke out in Europe, and approximately 85 per cent more than in 1918, the peak year of the First World War. They will also be required to handle 327 per cent more passenger traffic than they did in 1939 and 127 per cent more than in 1918, he added.

"I believe that the railroads will be able to do the job in 1944 as well as they have done it since the beginning of the war," Mr. Gormley said. "But to do it will require the superhuman effort of all concerned with transportation, and that means not only the railroads, but also shippers and receivers of freight, those who travel and the government."

Men and Equipment Needs

To handle the 1944 load, Mr. Gormley said, the railroads will need more equipment. He disclosed that government authorities have been asked to permit the railroads to obtain between 40,000 and 50,000 new freight cars and about 1200 new locomotives by next October.

Mr. Gormley described the manpower problem on the railroads as "serious," and said that the railroads are doing everything possible to help meet this situation. He urged the shippers and receivers of freight to assist the railroads in getting more efficiency by further improving car utilization.

Pointing out that the railroads during 1943 did a job "the like of which has never been seen before either in this country or in any other country in the world," Mr. Gormley stated that "they carried the biggest load that has ever been placed on any transportation agency, and broke all transportation records in doing it."

Freight Record of '43

On the freight side, Mr. Gormley reported, the railroads in 1943 turned in an estimated 725 billion ton-miles of transportation service, an increase of 13.6 per cent over 1942 and 117.4 per cent over 1939. Even more significant, he told shippers, the railroads in 1943 hauled 62.1 per cent more freight traffic than they did in 1929, when freight traffic set a record, and 78.8 per cent more than in 1918.

On the passenger side, Mr. Gormley said, the railroads in 1943 performed 85 billion passenger-miles, or 58.4 per cent more than in 1942 and 275.3 per cent more than in 1939.

"Consider," he said, "what the railroads have done for the army alone. During 1943, the railroads carried more than 10 million troops in special trains and special cars. This is over 1,200,000 more than they handled in similar movements during the entire 19 months that America was in the First World War. In addition to the organized movements, the railroads transported millions of other men traveling under orders in smaller groups. None of this, includes the personnel of the Navy or the Marine Corps or the thousands of prisoners of war. Neither does it include the millions of soldiers and sailors traveling on furlough or week-end passes.

Army Freight

"During 1943, the railroads have done an equally impressive freight job for the army. They have hauled nearly 83 million tons of army freight and express, or about four and one-half times as much as they moved during the entire period of the last war."

The railroads handled the much heavier traffic in 1943 with an increase in freight car ownership of only seven-tenths of one per cent, and an increase in locomotive ownership of but 1.2 per cent, Mr. Gormley observed. Passenger car ownership remained about the same, he said.

Mr. Gormley explained that the railroads have been able to carry the load with such a small increase in equipment due to a combination of better railroads and better railroading and railroad-shipper cooperation.

Greater Use of Equipment

"In other words," he said, "each unit of serviceable equipment has been made to do more work through greater utilization. For instance, one freight car today is turning out nearly as many ton-miles of transportation service as two cars did in 1929, and the same is true of freight locomotives."

"So far in this war," Mr. Gormley concluded, "the railroads have performed what has been described as 'miracles.' They have done what many people thought would be impossible for them to do. In fact, they have done more than even some railroad men believed they could do. I believe the railroads will go on doing an outstanding job, and I know they can count on the continued cooperation of shippers. When the war is over, no page in the history of the present struggle will be more brilliant than that devoted to the railroads' record."

Railroad Facts

Railroads carry more than 70 per cent of the total freight traffic of the nation.

The average haul of a ton of freight is now approximately 480 miles.

The average tractive effort of a steam locomotive today is approximately 50 per cent greater than that used at the time of the First World War, and fuel consumption per unit of traffic is about one-third less.

More tons of freight of all kinds moved by rail in 1943 originated in Pennsylvania than in any other state, with West Virginia second and Illinois third.

In order to conserve filing space and manpower many railroads now photograph waybills on miniature film, which work can be performed at the rate of 50 per minute.

Distribution Costs of Food Condemned by FTC

Federal Trade Commission's report is sharply critical of many established trade practices, sales efforts and "over-extended' marketing methods which, it claims, absorb nearly half of the consumer's dollar spent for processed foods.

IN a recent report on distribution costs in the processed food industry, the Federal Trade Commission sharply criticizes many established trade practices and states that expensive selling efforts and cumbersome marketing methods absorb as much as half of consumer dollars spent for processed foods and fresh fruits, vegetables and meats.

The report has had limited circulation because the Federal Trade Commission has been unable to secure funds to have it printed. Covering more than 500 typewritten pages, complete with dozens of charts and balance sheets, copies have been filed with the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and the chairman of the House agricultural committee. A copy is available for inspection at the FTC information office.

The FTC investigators were concerned with practices within the food trade which tended to increase distribution costs, as opposed to production and processing costs. Modern branding methods were credited with particular influence in food merchandising, and investigators devoted considerable effort to a study of the advertising, sales promotion and special dealer services which make up selling expenses.

"In consumer dollars," the FTC reported, "distribution expenses for some manufactured products have been lowered, while others, especially packaged goods distributed by manufacturers with extensive and expensive competitive selling and delivery services, are high."

"Possibilities of economy in distribution charges have not been exhausted," the FTC declared. "For many processed foods, as well as fresh fruits and vegetables, distribution as distinguished from production and processing, absorbs more than half the consumer's dollar."

Commenting that the system of food distribution in the United States "is complex and in many instances over-extended," the report states that the system allows the interposition of more middlemen than are necessary, accelerating the pyramiding of distributor margins "to the point where their total becomes unbearable to the consumer."

The survey was undertaken under a resolution of the FTC passed June 27, 1940. In recent months, it had been adjusted to provide information for OPA and other agencies in the wartime distribution and pricing of foods.

Most critical portions of the report were directed at handlers of fresh fruits and vegetables, where price is determined "by agreement of cooperating terminal receivers, commission merchants and handlers who control the limited rail, water and truck receiving and marketing facilities." The report asserts that the "monopoly" receives charges from this arrangement which "bear no relation to selling price" and are based "on the extent to which receivers, handlers, unions cooperate to perpetuate the monopoly.

"Entry of non-members into the market is prevented by rules which, from time to time, are enforced by threats, sabotage, and even violence," the FTC said.

Investigators found that some foods followed simple and direct channels, reaching the consumer with relatively small distribution charges. "Others," the report said, "follow devious channels and reach the consumer bearing such high distribution charges as to indicate that marked savings might be made by reducing the number of handlers and charges interposed between the producer and consumer, and by eliminating uneconomic practices."

Evolution of the food trade from a time when foods were predominately sold unbranded to the present practice of packaging and branding have made it possible for manufacturers to identify their products all the way to the consumer, the FTC observed. This identification of products, the report continued, has resulted in the advertising of brands to consumers on a territorial basis as wide as the distribution of the product.

Advertising and sales charges for promotion of various food products varies from 1/5c. per dollar on net sales of sugar to 8c. on some packaged cereals, the report says. Meat and canned fruits and vegetables bear relatively low advertising charges, FTC said, while flour, biscuits, crackers and coffee are relatively high.

Investigators also found that packaging methods adopted to support advertising, and promote marketing plans, add greatly to distribution costs. In the biscuit and baking industry, packaging may run to 12c. on each dollar of sales, it was said. Summarizing selling expenses in the baking industry, the report declared: "The consumer, therefore, in purchasing a dollar's worth of biscuits or crackers, spends nearly 17c. for the manufacturer's cost of packaging and advertising the dollar's worth of product."

The Commission investigators also discussed advertising allowances by brand owners to food retailers designed to stimulate local promotion of the product. These allowances, the report said, are generally started with relatively few distributors, chains or supermarkets included. As the news spreads, the report explains, other merchants demand allowances until "eventually all competing manufacturers must give them." The result, FTC said, is that the manufacturer's expense increases without a corresponding increase in the volume of sales.

"The manufacturers' prices are maintained at a high level," FTC commented, "and nobody benefits except the dealers who receive allowances, whose larger display advertising may divert trade from their competitors who receive no allowances."

A breakdown of the merchandising habits of the biscuit and cracker industry indicated that selling expenses ran as high as 35.28c. per dollar for three of the largest firms, working through their own sales organizations. The FTC had reports from 16 companies, which did nearly 75 per cent of the cracker and biscuit business in 1939.

These reports showed that packaging costs have increased sharply in this field in the past 10 years as

Post-War Distribution

"Distribution will be the key to post-war economic success," Arthur H. Motley, publisher, "American Magazine," said in Pittsburgh recently.

"We must have more goods at lower cost for more consumers," Mr. Motley warned. "If only half of the products currently on drawing boards and in laboratories reach retail markets, we'll have plenty of that thing called the 'abundant life.'

"The Russians know exactly what kind of materials they'll need after the war, how much they'll need, and the prices they'll have to pay," said Mr. Motley. And "Great Britain has been carrying on post-war planning since the summer of 1940. The British pointed out then that if they lose the war, it won't matter, but if they win the war, they must plan well in order to 'win the peace'." (Leffingwell)

Victory in Europe May Cause Major Shock To American Economy, Fennelly Declares

WARNING that the major shock to American economy will come immediately after the end of the war in Europe rather than after the final crushing of Japan, John F. Fennelly, executive director, Committee for Economic Development, told the American Society of Mechanical Engineers recently that we should guard against the "dangerous fallacy" of any easy transition period following the end of military operations in Europe.

Mr. Fennelly pointed out that the nation is already at grips with the problem of terminating and settling war contracts with the dollar value of contracts already terminated in excess of those canceled after World War I.

The total task, he pointed out, involves settlement of 100,000 prime contracts and more than 1,000,000 sub-contracts. He said that unless Congress deals promptly with the problem "the reconversion of industry may be disastrously delayed."

Discussing the goals of new high levels of production and employment, he said "business cannot possibly do this job alone and it does not help the cause of free enterprise to assert that it can. What is called for will be a vast co-operative undertaking in which business, labor, agriculture, government, and the general public will each be required to do its full share."

the industry responded to spirited efforts to market under brand names. Advertising budgets for 12 firms totaled $3,000,000, with one firm spending 9c. of every dollar of its net sales on advertising.

The average competitor spent 4.41c. of each dollar on advertising, the FTC said. Newspapers were the favorite medium, getting 30.82c. of every advertising dollar, while magazines and periodicals got 14.34c.; radio, 10.37c.; outdoor, 12c.

In the bread industry, selling expenses consumed 24.24c. of every dollar of income, FTC found, although a heavy portion of that went to routemen, and other members of the sales organization. The amount spent on advertising was only 2.63c. per dollar.

The FTC reported a decisive trend toward concentration in the flour milling industry, with 2,143 firms producing more wheat flour in 1939 than 11,691 milled in 1909. Advertising, it was found, is an important item of expense in the operation of flour mills, particularly of large concerns, which have developed nationwide markets. Reports acquired by FTC showed that for every dollar of income in 1939, flour millers spent 3.67c. in advertising while in 1940, their budgets dropped to 3.38c.

At $6 a barrel for flour, FTC pointed out, advertising cost 22.02c. per barrel in 1939 and 20.28c. per barrel in 1940. Radio was by far the most popular medium among flour firms, receiving 44.58c. of every advertising dollar. Magazines received 12.54c.; newspapers, 8.12c.; trade journals, 2.57c., and outdoor, 2.19c.

Because of the insistence on trade names, and the industry's efforts to create distinctive packages, FTC found that advertising was also an important factor in the distribution of packaged cereals, with leaders in the field spending an average of 7.67c. of each of their incoming dollars for it. For 14 selected firms, doing $129,000,000 in business, the advertising sum was actually 13.08c. of every dollar, while goods cost 64.11c., and the firms netted 12.37c. on each dollar.

Advertising cost 2.89c. of each dollar received by producers of evaporated and condensed milk; 3.62c. for ice cream marketers; 3.36c. for cheese producers; an average of 1.25c. for fluid milk dealers, and only .59c. per dollar income for butter. In the fluid milk industry, 129 firms spent an average of 1.1c. per dollar for advertising in 1940, the sum ranging from 2.9c. in Philadelphia where six firms were in competition, to .29c. in San Francisco, with five dealers.

Brand names, or lack of them, have widely influenced the advertising habits of the canners, FTC said. Only two of 92 firms questioned by FTC marketed all their pack under their own brand name, but in 1939, 43 firms spent $3,285,475 for advertising. Magazines received 29.8c. of each of these advertising dollars; newspapers, 7.7c.; radio, 5.6c. and trade journals, 2c.

Independent retailers spend a larger share of their dollar income for advertising than chains or consumer co-ops, FTC said. Although the average independent store provides no income for its proprietor other than his salary, FTC said they spend .73c. of each dollar income for advertising. Chains spent .66c. and cooperatives only .27c.

2,000,000 Net Tons

The country's transportation agencies in two years of war have done a remarkable job, but we are not yet over the hump, Joseph B. Eastman, director, Office of Defense Transportation, warned recently. He said shippers must make every effort to increase their loads by 10 per cent in the next few months.

At a press conference which marked the second anniversary of ODT, Mr. Eastman said the prospects for more transportation equipment, railway locomotives and freight cars, trucks and buses, was good. This, he said, should help shippers do their job.

A minimum of 2,000,000 net tons of rail are expected to be delivered in 1944, as compared to 1,485,000 tons in 1943, and 1,260,000 tons in 1942, he said. The production of freight cars next year probably will be "substantially larger" than the 30,000 cars produced in 1943.

Army Flys Freight Between Ohio and India

The longest air freight line in the world is now operating on regular schedule between Patterson Field, Ohio, and India. The Army said today that C-87 planes, the cargo version of the Consolidated B-24 Liberator bomber, were flying the route regularly delivering supplies to the air forces in the Orient.

Capt. J. L. Okenfus of Bloomfield, N. J., piloted the first flight early in October, making the 28,000-mile round trip in 12 days, including loading and unloading time. On the return trip it carried 8500 pounds of damaged parts to be repaired.

Believe Civilian Goods Have Hit Bottom —Buyers Foresee Better Prospects Ahead

SUPPLIES of consumer goods are believed to have hit bottom, according to the consensus of opinion expressed by buyers in year-end reports. The general opinion of businessmen in most parts of the country seems to be that prospects for 1944 are better for hard goods such as tools, hardware, farm implements, kitchenware, etc., than for so-called soft goods, namely, textiles, clothing, fabrics, etc.

In addition to goods shortages, two other problems perplex merchandisers. What will the government do, when the war ends, with tremendous stocks of supplies that will remain? And what will retail establishments do with their great quantities of "ersatz" goods, bought at high prices?

Gradual government releasing of metals, especially sheet steel and aluminum, will help the manufacturers of some hard goods lines, although the results will not be perceptible in retail stores until the third and fourth quarters of 1944, it was said.

Materials alone, however, will not solve all of the difficulties in these fields. In hard goods lines, manpower shortages and lack of fabricating capacity will hold back any all-out resumption of civilian products output by any firm.

Specific items in which no improvements can be foreseen for next year, however, include furniture; wool rugs; refrigerators; washing machines; sewing machines; and electrical appliances.

How Consumers Spend Their Income

Information on savings now available contradict wanton expenditures among lower income groups. Figures reported indicate creation of huge post-war reserve capable of sustaining long period of prosperity if not dissipated through uncontrolled inflation.

SINCE the war, consumer savings show the largest increase in the country's history. Information on savings, now available, contradict opinion held in many quarters of wanton expenditures particularly among lower income families who are the principal beneficiaries of high wartime earnings.

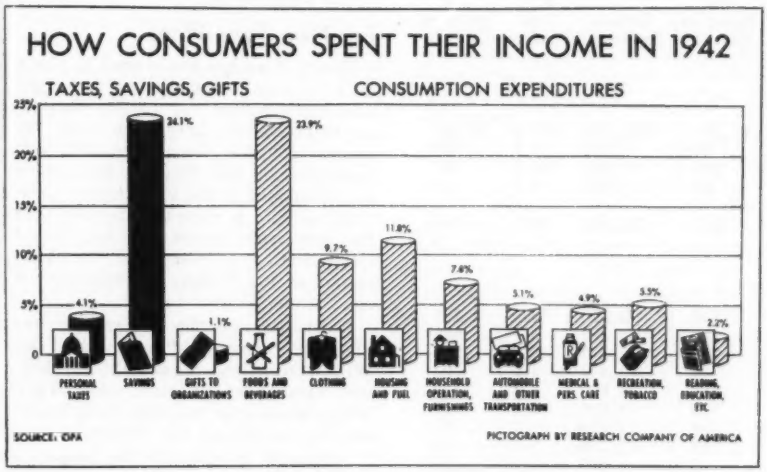
Figures reported indicate the creation of a huge post-war reserve as the keystone for a sustained period of prosperity, if spent in orderly procedure rather than through dissipation incidental to uncontrolled inflation.

It is anticipated that government, with a blessing by industry, will impose post-war price and rationing controls until consumer demands become fairly stabilized.

Marketing, advertising and research men welcomed with a sigh of relief, the unusually comprehensive analysis, "Consumer Incomes and Expenditures in the United States," when this study covering the years 1935-1936 was finally released by the National Resources Committee.

However, due to the tremendous increase in the national income during war years, and the relative scarcity of some merchandise items, it was not until recently that data were available which reported on these highly significant changes in income of American families, and the distribution of expenditures for major categories of consumption items.

In analyzing important trends which reflected movements in the civilian economy in wartime, many problems were bound to come up in efforts to determine how the growth of aggregate income, its apportionment by income level, and the distribution of taxes, savings, and consumption affected operations of companies in all fields.



Data released recently by the Division of Research, Consumer Income and Demand Branch, Office of Price Administration, focuses sharp attention on all of these related problems, and now permit a more accurate evaluation of those factors in the civilian economy which have a direct bearing on the distribution of goods.

It is significant to observe that during 1941 consumption expenditures took 82.4 per cent of every consumer dollar as against 70.7 per cent during 1942. Consumer savings jumped from $12.26 billions, or 14.1 per cent of income in 1941, compared with $25.44 billions, or 24.1 per cent of income in 1942.

As everyone anticipated, the gasoline rationing program was reflected in a substantial drop in civilian expenditures for private automobile transportation. This item decreased from 8.1 per cent in 1941 to 3.4 per cent of total civilian expenditures for 1942. Since other transportation rose some $350 millions, the net difference appears to represent the substantial cut made in passenger-car mileage in this country.

Figures recently released by the National Automobile Dealers Assn. report passenger-car registrations in 30 states, scattered over the country, as of May 1, 1943, were running on an average about 10 per cent below the corresponding date in 1942. Truck registrations were about 4 per cent less.

Data reported in this article represent the most reliable current barometers on the important subject of Consumer Income and Distribution of Expenditures.

Analyzed in conjunction with data available from other sources reporting on savings bank deposits, purchases of war savings bonds, sales of ordinary life insurance, and other current economic information, figures now revealed provide a foundation for estimating the approximate dammed-up savings, and the extent to which their accumulations will affect the post-war demand for consumer goods.

The United States Department of Commerce recently estimated about 80 per cent of savings by individuals with less than $10,000 incomes. Prior to World War II, gross savings by individuals never reached $10 billion in any one year.

Economic conditions in a wartime economy are bound to fluctuate violently. Military service demands and manpower requirements for essential industries and services create kaleidoscopic changes in the location of population, shopping habits, and merchandise, equipment, housing and other consumer requirements. Millions of women today are wage earners as well as consumers.

From recent studies, it is apparent that many of these women will wish to continue in their present or similar industrial employment in the post-war period. These studies reveal that many men do not wish to return to their pre-war jobs due to dissatisfaction with earnings, job stability, working hours, and an infinite variety of other reasons. This attitude is typical, particularly, of those workers formerly associated with the distributive trades.

In military planning and logistics, a General Staff, based on field and other reports, studies operations, prepares plans for meeting current problems and situations, and then projects a multiple series of plans to meet every possible exigency and situation, as an essential prerequisite to ultimate victory.

A post-war timetable, for industry, is important! Industry, therefore, should organize its own General Staff to prepare for a quick shift from armaments production to peace-time products. Such a General Staff will necessitate the collaboration of trained personnel and specialists in the field of technical and marketing research, conversion, production, labor, economics, advertising, selling, distribution, and other management problems.

We were unprepared for war. We must be prepared for peace. This is our sacred trust and responsibility to the men and women in service. Victory must be complete. They must not have sacrificed in vain!

(1) Estimates cover all civilian consumers except those living in institutions. Figures represent calendar years.
(2) The aggregate civilian money income as reported by the OPA is conceptually and statistically quite different from the U. S. Department of Commerce estimate of national income, but is quite consistent with it. The OPA measure of income excludes payments (in money and kind) to the armed forces; it excludes all income received by residents of institutions; and it excludes all non-money income, such as home produced food and the imputed rental value of owner-occupied homes. These items are included in the Department of Commerce income series.
(3) In 1942 there were slightly over 41 million civilian "spending units," consisting roughly of 33 million civilian families of two or more persons, and 8 million single civilians.
(4) Personal taxes shown include income taxes, poll taxes, and certain minor personal property taxes. It should be noted that sales taxes, excise taxes, and all indirect taxes on consumption are included under expenditures for goods and services.
(5) Savings are defined as the net change in assets and liabilities of the spending unit during the year.
(6) Gifts consist only of money contributions to church, Red Cross, and other institutions and funds.
(7) Consumption consists of money expenditures only. (See reference No. 2.)

Ford Has Plans For New Type Plane

Henry Ford has announced he plans to build giant, multiple-engine cargo-passenger planes "of unique design" at Willow Run after the war "to create jobs for the people who will need them." The 80-year-old founder and president of the Ford Motor Company said in a recent statement that the new-type planes possibly would revolutionize long-distance transportation as his Model T revolutionized road travel 35 years ago.

Ford disclosed the government has given his company "first option" on Willow Run, the mammoth, $60,000,000 Ford-operated plant near Ypsilanti, Mich., now building B-24 bombers for the Army Air Forces.

Although details of the new-type plane were not disclosed, it was understood that Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh, an engineering employee of the company for about 18 months, had been working closely with Ford on design of the plane and engine.

Army Takes Over Railroads

BY executive order of the President, the Secretary of War on Dec. 27, 1943, took control of all continental railroads in United States to prevent suspension of operations by a threatened strike called for Dec. 30 by several of the railroad unions. Lt. Gen. B. B. Somervell, commanding the Army Service Forces, was designated by the Secretary of War to take control of the railroads, and to Maj. Gen. C. P. Gross, chief of Transportation, Army Service Forces, was assigned the responsibility of operating the railroads.

In the executive order taking over possession and operation of the railroads, the Secretary of War was authorized to terminate operation "as soon as he determines that such possession, control and operation are no longer required to prevent interruption of transportation service."

Informed government and railroad sources were of opinion that government operation of the railroads would be of short duration. Other sources of opinion, both political and business, were sceptical of this, many expressing the belief that the army is not likely to relinquish control of the railroads until the military campaigns in Europe have been concluded. How government operation will affect civilian passenger and freight traffic is uncertain at this writing.

ODT Estimates Carriers Must Fill 62,000 More Jobs Before July

Geographical shifts in traffic, labor turnover, and relocation of factories and other war facilities are expected to increase traffic loads during coming year.

DESPITE shortages of workers, the public transportation industries are successfully carrying more passengers and more freight than ever before, and no movement has been held up solely because of inadequate manpower, the Office of Defense Transportation has reported. It warns, however, that the transportation manpower problem is serious, especially in maintenance and repairs.

This statement was made by the Division of Transport Personnel, ODT, on the basis of a report by the division to the Senate Special Committee Investigating the National Defense Program, of which Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, is chairman.

There was an increase of approximately 400,000 workers in the for-hire transportation field between July, 1941, and July, 1943, making the total number now employed almost 3,000,000, the ODT reported. More than half of the 400,000 workers added have gone into the railroad industry.

Before July, 1944, the ODT estimated, 62,000 more jobs will have to be filled in the transportation industries to meet expected increases in traffic loads, and because of turnover many more than this number of persons will have to be hired. These additional workers will be harder to obtain, the ODT said.

"Geographical shifts in traffic constitute another source of manpower difficulties for the transportation industry," the ODT said. "These shifts may result from developments in war strategy. For example, the anticipated increase in the movement of military supplies to West Coast ports during the coming year, or from relocation of factories and other production facilities. Every such shift requires some redistribution of transportation manpower, with its attendant problems, but the difficulties are particularly great when the shift requires additional transportation workers in acute labor shortage areas, such as the West Coast."

The Division of Transport Personnel summarized other data contained in its report to the Truman committee as follows:

Long Hour Industries

Most branches of transportation have always been relatively long-hour industries. In the railroad industry, average weekly hours of work have increased steadily since the bombing of Pearl Harbor. There are very few war industries whose employes average a longer work week than do railroad employes. While figures are not available for other transportation industries, many reports have been received of very long hours in the trucking and local transit industries.

Substantial savings in manpower have also resulted from a number of orders issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the ODT.

Tightening labor markets and shortages are causing transport companies to resort to federal employment services to a greater extent than ever before. For example, the Railroad Retirement Board Employment Service placed about 197,000 workers in the railroad industry in the year ended July, 1943, compared with 59,000 placed during the previous year. Other types of transportation were served by the U. S. Employment Service and by the Recruitment and Manning Organization of the War Shipping Administration.

Programs

Comprehensive manpower programs are in preparation by the ODT for shipping on the Great Lakes, local transit systems, trucking lines, warehouse operators and air transport. Working with other Government agencies, particularly the War Manpower Commission, the ODT has developed such programs for inland waterways, taxicabs, railroads, retail coal delivery and automotive maintenance. Those already worked out are in varying stages of operation and provide, in the main, simple but coordinated machinery for industry self-help. These programs include plans for training new workers.

Women

"Women and non-white persons constitute the greatest reservoir of new workers, but so far these have been under-utilized by transportation in general," ODT officials state. "In the case of women, strenuous efforts still must be made to relax seniority and other union restrictions which prevent the industry from utilizing this source of labor at maximum effectiveness. In the case of negroes, much remains to be done to make possible their promotion into more skilled and into supervisory jobs."

Mexicans

Importation of Mexican nationals, chiefly for work on western railroads, has afforded substantial manpower relief to rail carriers, which last fall faced critical labor shortages. As of early September, there were 14,551 Mexican workers in service on the railroads, which have indicated a desire to employ from 7,500 to 10,000 more Mexicans, and negotiations to this end are now under way, it is said.

Far-Reaching Commercial Air System Declared Vital for U. S. After War

Declaring that a far-reaching commercial air system is vital to make the United States a great trading nation after the war, officials of five domestic airlines, speaking at a meeting of the Sales Executives Club, New York, last month, urged a national policy that will permit broader post-war participation of domestic airlines in international commerce, and immediate government action to assure United States airlines access to American-built overseas air bases.

Jack Frye, president, Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., stated the industry believes that the nation which can solidly establish itself in world markets first will achieve the "quickest and soundest" recovery from the repercussions of the war. Operation of an adequate air transport service "to every commercial area on earth can speedily materialize this ambition for the United States," he said.

"A far-flung commercial air system," Mr. Frye continued, "is a prime element if we hope to make the United States a great trading nation. Of course we will be confronted with foreign competition. But domestic airlines of the United States have led the airlines of the world in safety, service and economy of operation. We will continue to improve this record.

"We ask that the domestic airlines be permitted to do in peace-time what they are doing in war-time, with modifications to conform to trade conditions. If our policies are followed, the airlines of America will circle the globe in the future as they now do in military service. When the war is won, most of our international routes can be profitably operated by commercial domestic airlines. Certain routes will be operated at a loss for reasons of security or for a period of commercial development. Some of these routes may require subsidies, for a period, and we as a nation should be prepared to grant them."

A. N. Kemp, president, American Airlines, Inc., declared that "the American-flag air carrier is going to dominate the air just as Britain has dominated the sea." Subject to "reasonable regulation" by governmental agencies, the industry believes in free and open world-wide competition, he said.

Pointing out that the nation possesses no post-war rights, "even of access," to overseas air bases built for the armed forces at a cost of over $600,000,000, J. H. Carmichael, vice president, Pennsylvania Central Airlines, asserted that expansion of American lines will be impossible unless the Government quickly acquires such rights.

S. J. Solomon, president, Northeast Airlines, Inc., told the group that "it would be foolish to create and continue artificial barriers to the one means of transportation that knows no natural barriers." The only limitation that he believed will be necessary is the limitation which must be imposed upon the enemy countries.

Exports Up 29% —Imports Gain 25%

Export shipments for the first 10 months of 1943 were $10,378,000,000, or 29 per cent above the entire 1942 total of $8,036,132,000 and 63 per cent above the total for the corresponding 10 months of 1942, $6,376,000,000, according to the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce.

Export totals exclude shipments to United States armed forces abroad, but include lend-lease goods shipped to the United Nations.

General imports of merchandise totaled $329,000,000 in October, an increase of 17 per cent over September and 64 per cent over October of last year.

Value of general imports for the first 10 months of 1943 was $2,766,000,000, surpassing the 1942 total of $2,742,000,000. The January-October, 1943, imports represent a 25 per cent increase over the corresponding period of 1942.

World Trade Meeting At Chicago Feb. 14

Chicago's 10th annual world trade conference will be held in the LaSalle Hotel, Feb. 14, the Export Managers Club of Chicago and The Chicago Assn. of Commerce, joint sponsors of the event since its inception in 1935 have announced. The theme of the conference will be postwar foreign trade.

New Shipping Plans Of United Fruit Co.

The United Fruit Co. has announced that it will establish a regular weekly service with large, modern, fully refrigerated vessels from the West Coast of the United States to Great Britain and Europe, as soon as possible. Six of the vessels are now being constructed and are expected to be completed during the last half of 1944. Each ship, it is said, will have about 300,000 cu. ft. of refrigerated cargo space, and a speed of over 18 knots.

Foreign Assets Here of 13 Billions Held Strong Post-War Trade Factor

Post-war demands for American goods of all kinds are expected to be very large, especially from western European countries and Latin America, which are likely to be heavy buyers particularly of manufacturing equipment and farm machinery, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

How foreign countries will pay for American goods after the war is one of the questions that have been troubling many business men. They forget the large amount of foreign assets that are frozen, earmarked and on deposit in the United States, foreign trade experts point out.

An analysis made by the Treasury reveals that foreign countries have substantial assets in the United States, amounting to over $13,000,000,000.

This total includes earmarked gold valued at $2,500,000,000, bank deposits amounting to over $4,000,000,000, stocks and bonds estimated at $3,160,000,000 and direct investments of $1,950,000,000.

Of the total, enemy countries own nearly $500,000,000 while enemy-occupied countries own $4,000,000,000. Consequently, European countries own about $4,500,000,000.

Funds belonging to other blocked countries amount to about $2,683,000,000. These figures indicate that foreign nations are in a position to buy substantial quantities of goods in the United States, foreign trade authorities say.

Free Enterprise

By JAMES B. HILL
President
Louisville & Nashville Railroad

o o o

This is part of a talk made at a recent meeting of the Ohio Valley Transportation Advisory Board in Louisville, Ky.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Hill expressed his indebtedness for many of his ideas to four recent books: Crowther's "Time to Inquire," Queeny's "The Spirit of Enterprise," Wriston's "A Challenge to Freedom," and Snyder's "Capitalism the Creator."

o o o

SOME, who have a yearning for a planned economy, complain that those who advocate free enterprise fail to define what it means. They claim to fear it means the privilege or license to exploit, whether exploitation be of government, the public or labor. In the face of the Sherman and Clayton Acts, effective labor legislation and many other existing laws prescribing and limiting the action of men, can such a claim really be sincere? Free enterprise or freedom of enterprise needs no more precise definition than freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom to assemble peaceably and other things protected by the Constitution. All of those freedoms can be exercised only in recognition of similar rights of all others. All such blessings must be adapted to the reasonable limitations prescribed by laws which men themselves make in the interest of society.

Private and free enterprise is one means of expression of individual freedom, initiative, resourcefulness, energy and ability, of a people working under able leadership and a rule of law, and not under the varying whims of men and their self-chosen organizations. It is the servant of men possessed of the inalienable rights and added privileges afforded them by the Constitution. It is the material fulfillment of a recognition of the worth of each individual and his right to be rewarded for his accomplishment according to his merit. It and its accomplishment are the composite outgrowth and expression of the blessings of human liberty. Its final result is the residue of trial and error.

Capitalism Defined

Capitalism is defined as accumulated wealth employed or capable of being employed in increasing production or more wealth. It is the accumulated savings of things produced over and above what is consumed. In its simplest aspects and in the beginning almost always it implies some sacrifices on the part of him who foregoes present use for future advantages. History records great traders, enterprisers, accumulators of wealth, and that civilization followed trade routes. Slowly at first did capital accumulate until, as it increased production, greater and greater became its volume and more and more came its return to still further investment in the instrumentalities of production. While the savings of the masses are to some degree found in the stocks and bonds of the great corporations, still they are small in extent as compared with the undistributed earnings or surplus which business itself has plowed back into further development. Capital then has been the essential instrumentality with which business leaders furthered material progress and welfare. No inventor or invention or no man however much possessed with leadership or vision can accomplish a great deal without someone takes the risk of financial gain or loss. The zest for achievement, for personal gain, has been the main driving force both of the inventor and his backer. Destroy these things and you will silence forever the urge for accomplishment.

Its Accomplishments

What are the great accomplishments of our capitalistic system of free enterprise? First, consider the undeniable statement that the development of industrial enterprise in any community is always conducive to more employment, higher wages, better working conditions, better homes, better education, better business conditions; and that such investment of capital is always responsible where any people in all history have ever risen from poverty to affluence and culture, and that the degree of their rise is proportionate to the accumulation and constructive use of capital. Look around you at the wonders and welfare of our country where the lot of the average man is far better than almost anywhere else in the world. Oh, but you say, look at the poor, the slums, the underprivileged, at the great contrast everywhere abounding. I reply, it was ever thus, but that the spread is narrowing, and as science and technology advance, men are conscientiously studying the problems of distribution, and if the day comes when education is better, when men are better informed, maybe we shall realize a condition where the lot of all can be much more improved. No day will ever see, however, the erasure of the differences in the abilities of men, nor for long an equalization of their rewards. There will always be men superior and men inferior. The relation will show as a constant among all humanity and all nations. If plotted graphically, the higher the ability or quality will appear, with a very few at the top of the chart, and with increasing progression in numbers and decreasing ability toward the bottom.

Some Dangers

There is no claim here that concentrated wealth does not represent great, even dangerous, power if unwisely used or uncontrolled, but if it takes no worse form than producing a few wastrels whose number and activities are infinitesimal as compared with the beneficent accomplishments of a free enterprise, the price paid will be small indeed compared to the price to be paid under the socialization of industry and the removal of the rewards for ability and thrift. The desire for gain can be carried to unjustifiable and unworthy ends, yet it is one of the strongest motivating forces of mankind. Again, great desire to achieve does not always reside in the average representative of government or ruler, nor among them with some exceptions is there generally found the ability to achieve. The process of their selection and election in democracies militates against the probabilities of great individual accomplishment. The spirit of competition does not usually reside in governmental bureaus and in them is found but little reward for hard work, study and high accomplishment.

Is the continued existence of free and private enterprise endangered? Many sincerely believe it is. There is nothing political in asking such a question. There are forces in motion independent of the party in power that may endanger its very life. These forces may endanger the form of our government itself, and deprive men of the liberties they were so long in attaining. The present administration, and many of those in high political power often indicate their belief in free enterprise and the desire to maintain it. There are others who believe in a socialistic form of government, who do not like anything connected with the capitalistic system, and who would not stop short of a totalitarian government which, while claiming an entire democracy of the masses would subject them to the uncontrolled will of a few men where not only freedom of enterprise but individual freedom itself would not exist.

Planned Economy

Those who would fully plan all things for all men must necessarily assume that those who do the planning and the enormous number who direct the execution of the plans are all-wise, unselfish, patriotic and good; and that all men so regimented are equally willing to do their full part. There could be no selfishness, no indolence, no shirkers, no misunderstandings—all would be satisfied and happy. How foolish to advocate or expect such! Men are not made that way.

The creation of such a planned or socialistic procedure is to overlook human frailties and to establish a ruling organization which will soon assume despotic powers. Freedom will have departed. It should not be the policy of the laws to extend the power of regulation beyond the just protection of the public interest.

There are some who while not believing in the complete ownership and operation of enterprise by the government, believe in a permanent partial ownership and operation. The last is impossible of successful accomplishment. Ultimately private enterprise must yield to the greater advantages and power of government in a competitive economy, because the governmental enterprise is not required to be self-sustaining and at times is supported by taxation of its competitor.

It is startling how much is published with respect to the government providing security for the individual—old age insurance, sickness and health benefits, unemployment insurance, pensions and the like, and how little is said about the obligation of citizenship and the forethought a man himself should take for the uncertainties of tomorrow.

Its Cost

Few persons seem to realize all of these so-called social advantages, however theoretically desirable, must be paid by some one; that the government has nothing with which to pay them except it be taken from some one or industry in taxes; that taxes are a limiting factor on production itself; and that soon the law of diminishing returns asserts itself, and the expected social benefits through too much security and consequent taxation and the certain stagnation of human effort and production—becomes less than before.

When War Ends

The war will end some day but maybe not as soon as some hopefully prophesy. When it comes, many serious problems will arise. They should, as far as possible, be appraised and anticipated. Many of them will perhaps not lend themselves to an immediate and satisfactory solution. They demand and deserve a patient understanding and consideration.

Ultimately there may be 10,000,000 men released from active military service. As many more will in the course of time be released from war industries. A prompt and satisfactory distribution of all these men is next to impossible of quick accomplishment. The carrying charges on the Federal debt alone will be tremendous, the normal expense of government will be increased by the necessary temporary aid to demobilization; and the chances are military expenditures will continue on a high plane. All of this will require continued heavy taxation. Business enterprises, with enormous war contracts, and which were changed over from peace-time production, must undergo a reverse process. This may be neither quick nor easy. Many business enterprises will be facing depreciation, obsolescence and a new set of conditions.

Flux and Confusion

In all of this flux and confusion, men are likely to lose patience and insist upon the immediate unattainable. This restlessness and temporary disturbance should be met with patience, understanding, and reason. Returning soldiers previously employed will return to their places in industry. Many of the younger men and women who went to war or worked for wages will go back to school. Many of the mature women will go back to their homes although perhaps with some discontentment. Managers will set about a conversion of their plants from war to a peace-time operation and the making of old and new goods. Much money in the hands of eager consumers may tend to an unfortunate inflation and maybe the necessity for temporary price control, and even some degree of temporary rationing.

No one would say our entire system is perfect. It should improve by reason, trial and error, but it is madness to undermine its foundations or to suggest the substitution therefor of old and discredited schemes with new and disguised fronts. Liberty of the individual was too hard won and is too precious to be thus jeopardized.

When the war ends the first and outstanding essential is to get private and free enterprise functioning. It made this country great and if fostered and encouraged by government and public authority will again bring prosperity. The government in business for the purpose is too much like a man trying to lift himself by his boot straps.

Immediately, taxation should be so adjusted and directed as to permit the retention of a large reserve by industry to tide over the transition from war to peace, not for dividends, but for productive operation and expansion, hence creating employment and an increase of goods for consumption and use.

I have tried to picture to you something of the merits of free enterprise, of the dangers that threaten it. There is little hope that all men constituting the masses can be sufficiently informed in time to effectively influence their action at the polls against dangerous theories already disproven. There is only one hope—and that is through informed, aggressive and unselfish leadership. It must truthfully and convincingly tell the story of freedom and free enterprise to its own organizations and to other groups through personal and public contacts. It must try to interest the leaders of labor. It must try to select our public men for statesmanlike qualities; and enlist their support.

As leaders, it is your responsibility to correct any faults of free enterprise and sell its story, not for the exploitation of the masses but to their continuing and growing betterment. The time is short. I hope the leaders are not too few.

Chile's Coal Deposits Will Be Developed

Chile's coal only partially developed, offers important possibilities for a chemical industry, in the belief of C. C. Concannon, chief, Chemical Unit, United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, who has been loaned to Chile for a year to aid in chemical development. He expects to make Chile's coal one of his chief studies.

The largest coal producer in Latin America, Chile has reserves estimated at somewhat over 3,000,000,000 tons. Production has been around 2,000,000 tons a year. But the country has imported considerable coal.

Mr. Concannon plans to look into distillation of Chilean coal. Out of that process might come many consumer products as well as chemicals needed industrially, he says.

Chile's coal includes both bituminous and sub-bituminous. It has been mined for over 100 years. At the Lota mine, largest producer, records of output go back to 1852. The Lota and Schwager mines, both in Arauca province, now produce nearly nine-tenths of the total. They have started improvement programs aimed at a substantial output boost. New shafts are being sunk. Mines are being mechanized.

Storage and Transportation

WHEN the transportation history of these times is written, a great share of the credit for the fact, of crucial importance, that railroad equipment has been kept in free and constant circulation will go to the highly efficient coordination between the shipping agencies of the government, especially the army, and the railroads; to the like coordination, sponsored with the utmost and continuing zeal by the regional advisory boards, the National Industrial Traffic League, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and other like organizations, between the private shippers and the railroads; to the efficient coordination of the movement of traffic by rail to the ports with its movement overseas by ships, sponsored by the army, the navy, the Lend-Lease Administration, the British War Shipping Administration, and my own office, and to the effective coordination of storage and warehouse facilities with transportation, in which my office in collaboration with other federal agencies has assumed quite a measure of leadership and in which we have had splendid cooperation from the warehousemen of the country.

LEGAL NEWS . . .

By LEO T. PARKER
Legal Editor

Lost Whiskey

It is the prevailing legal doctrine that when the owner of stored goods has proven a demand for the return of the goods bailed, and that the bailee has failed to return them, a prima facie case against the bailee has been made. This rule proceeds upon the theory either that the bailee, being in possession, knows better than any other person why he does not return them, or from a presumption that he actually retains the goods, and by his refusal to deliver them converts them to his own use.

On the other hand, when it is shown that the goods were stolen, the prima facie case or presumption is overcome, and the duty of proving negligence rests entirely on the shoulders of the owner of the goods.

For example, in Rubinstein v. Washington Cold Storage Co., 138 Pac. (2d) 852, Wash., it was disclosed that on June 30, 1934, the Northwest Distilleries, Inc., a Washington corporation, stored in the warehouse of a cold storage company several barrels of whiskey all of which were described in the negotiable warehouse receipt.

The evidence shows that the warehouse receipt was pledged to National Bank of Commerce, Seattle, Wash., to secure advances made to the Northwest Distilleries, Inc., to whom the warehouse receipt was issued.

Suit was filed against the warehouse company and testimony was given that on or about July 1, 1940, upon inspection being made by the U. S. Government Liquor Inspector of liquor in storage for the purpose of imposing federal liquor tax, it was discovered that all barrels held by the storage company under the warehouse receipt were entirely empty and contained no whiskey whatever.

The warehouse company alleged that it was not liable because when the whiskey was placed in storage it was improperly packaged in defective barrels so that the same leaked out and was entirely destroyed and lost through no fault whatsoever of the warehouse employes. Also, testimony was given that at the time of the storage of the barrels, and the issuance of the warehouse receipt, some of the barrels were leaking and the warehouse company "on divers and sundry occasions advised the plaintiff and Northwest Distilleries, Inc., that the said barrels were leaking due to improper cooperage and requested them to properly recooper said barrels."

However, the party who filed the suit contended, but did not prove, that the warehouse employes stole the whiskey. In holding the warehouse company not liable, the higher court said:

"There is no presumption of negligence on the part of the bailee from the mere proof of loss by theft. . . . It has always been held that there is a presumption that the master has exercised due care in the selection of his servant. What is there, then, peculiar in a bailment case, which should change this rule and require us to hold that the master is presumed to have been guilty of negligence in engaging his employe? We can see nothing."

Liquor Tax

Modern higher courts hold that the federal laws and regulations governing the imposition and collection of tax on liquor do not determine the right of an internal revenue bonded warehouse to recover the amount of a tax lien from the owner.

For illustration, in Los Angeles Warhouse Co. v. American Distilling Co., Cal., 139 Pac. (2d) 641, it was shown that an internal revenue bonded warehouse company contracted to receive distilled spirits for storage. The warehouse company was under a bond required by the government to pay the tax on spirits when they were destroyed in transit. The legal question arose whether the warehouse company could collect the tax from the shipper. In holding in the affirmative the higher court said:

"The gin was in the constructive custody of plaintiff as the receiving warehouse at the time it was destroyed, and such destruction was tantamount to removal from bond. Under the terms of its transportation bond plaintiff thereupon became liable to the United States Government for the immediate payment of the tax, and at the demand of the Collector of Internal Revenue, advanced such tax."

Tariff Applicable

Generally, all shippers are charged with notice of tariff and regulations promulgated by the Public Service Commission. Therefore, a carrier may limit its liability for loss of shipped goods by special contract or regulation authorized by the Utility Commission, provided the shipper assents to special contract or has notice of regulations.

For example, in Peninsula Transit Corp. v. Jacoby, 26 S. E. (2d) 97, Va., it was shown that a motor carrier's liability for lost merchandise was limited to $25 in accordance with regulations approved by the Public Service Commission. The carrier complied with the regulations by posting notice thereof at its office and by printing notice on claim check and contract with the shipper.

A shipment of merchandise was lost during transportation and the shipper sued the carrier to recover full value of the lost goods. However, the higher court limited the carrier's liability to $25.

Salesman's Guarantee

An employer never is bound by a guarantee made by an ordinary employe unless (1) the employer has notified the other party that he will be bound by contracts, statements and guarantees made by the employe; or (2) in the past the employe's employer has, without due notification, accepted contracts made by the employe whereby the court may imply that he is authorized to make valid contracts; or (3) the employe practiced actual fraud, under which circumstances the employer is responsible although he did not expressly or impliedly authorize the employe to perform the fraudulent acts, or make the fraudulent statement or guarantee.

For example, in Kearns v. Biltwell Co., 23 S. E. (2d) 310, it was disclosed that a salesman guaranteed his employer's products to a purchaser. Later the purchaser sued the seller for breach of this warranty. In holding the salesman's employer not liable, the higher court said:

"The allegation is that 'defendant's salesman and employe guaranteed,' and 'relying upon said guarantee, the plaintiffs purchased the bed.' This is far from alleging that the defendant (employer) made the warranty."

This court clearly indicated that a purchaser cannot expect to win a favorable verdict in a suit filed against a seller based upon breach of a salesman's guarantee, unless such purchaser proves that the salesman was authorized to make the guarantee, or that such salesman practiced fraud.

Chattel Mortgages

According to modern higher courts when a chattel mortgage becomes past due, the holder of the mortgage has three remedies for realizing upon his security: (1) he may peaceably take possession of the chattel, advertise and sell it, and apply the proceeds of sale to his secured debt, paying the surplus, if any, to the mortgagor; (2) if possession be refused, he may institute claim and delivery proceedings to get possession of the chattel for the purpose of sale; (3) he may institute a proceeding similar to the foreclosure of a mortgage of real estate.

Except for certain minor differences a conditional sale contract is in legal effect tantamount to a chattel mortgage, and a majority of suits on conditional contracts for simplicity may be considered as if upon chattel mortgages. See, Hill v. Winnsboro Granite Corp., 99 S. E. 836.

When a purchaser enters into a contract, involving either a conditional contract or a chattel mortgage, usually the purchaser agrees to make stipulated payments on installment basis. It is important to know that when a purchaser fails to make agreed payments, and his demands for possession of encumbered property is refused by the purchaser, the seller has the above mentioned choice of invoking his remedy against the seller. This means that when a conditional contract of sale, or a chattel mortgage, becomes past due the mortgagee may peaceably take possession of the merchandise and advertise, sell and apply the proceeds of the sale to secure the debt. All of these points of law were upheld in Speizman v. Guill, 25 S. E. (2d) 731.

In another case a purchaser contracted to purchase a motor truck for $5,000. He paid $500 down and agreed to make monthly payments until the balance, including interest, was fully paid. After paying a total of $1,000 the purchaser breached the contract and failed to make other payments. The seller repossessed the truck and offered it for sale. Finally, it was sold for $3,000. Thus the seller receiver $500, plus overdue interest charges, less than the purchaser had agreed to pay for the truck. The purchaser believed that when the seller repossessed the truck his obligations were at an end. However, the seller sued the purchaser for $500, plus the interest charges.

The higher court promptly held in favor of the seller, and the purchaser's chattels were attached and sold by legal proceedings to enforce payment of the amount. This same law is applicable to real estate foreclosures.

Both Negligent

Generally, a person may not recover damages for a sustained injury where the testimony proves that both the party who filed the suit and the party against whom the suit was filed were equally negligent.

For illustration, in Smith v. Superior and Duluth Transfer Co., 10 N. W. (2d) 153, Wis., testimony proved that a pedestrian was injured by being struck by a truck of a transfer company while walking across a city street. She and her husband sued the transfer company to recover damages for their respective injuries sustained as a result of the collision.

It is interesting to observe that the higher court held that where a pedestrian is struck by a truck while attempting to cross a city street, and the testimony proves that both pedestrian and truck driver were causally negligent in respect to yielding the right of way neither is entitled to recover damages for sustained injuries.

ICC Must Approve

Many readers have made inquiries regarding the correct legal procedure when an interstate common carrier contemplates selling its business.

In Zabarsky v. Flemings, 32 Atl. (2d) 663, Vt., the higher court held that when a state or federal law provides that a transaction involving the purchase of properties of an interstate motor carrier must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, no part of the transaction may be lawfully consummated without the prior approval of the Commission.

Compensation Allowed

Recently a higher court held that dependents of an interstate employe may receive compensation from the state in which the employe is killed.

In Holly v. Industrial Commission, 50 N. E. (2d) 152, O., it was shown that a truck driver was a resident of and maintained his home in Erie, Pa. He had entered into an employment contract with a Pennsylvania corporation with its principal place of business in the city of Erie, and engaged in the business of transporting freight by motor truck. It maintained and operated terminals in Erie, and in Ashtabula, Youngstown and Cleveland, O.

One day the truck driver was killed in Ohio while operating a truck hauling merchandise in interstate commerce. The higher court allowed compensation to the dependents of the truck driver. This court held that actually the dependent of non-resident employe fatally injured in Ohio, in the course of the employment, was entitled to participate in the Ohio Compensation fund although the services performed by the employe at time of the injury were interstate. The court said:

"It is well established that within the limits of the commerce clause of the federal Constitution interstate carriers may be subject to the workmen's compensation laws of the state unless and until Congress has legislated on the subject. No such federal statute has been enacted, and hence that field has not been thus pre-empted.'

To Avoid Liability

Question: How may a company which owns and operates a motor truck avoid liability for injuries caused by negligence of the driver? Ever-Right Trucking.

Answer: The relation of master and servant must not exist, but instead the truck driver must be legally an "independent contractor."

Whether one acting for an employer is a servant or an independent contractor, the following matters of fact are considered: (a) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the employer may exercise over the details of the work; (b) whether or not the one employed is hired in a distinct occupation or business; (c) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision; (d) the skill required in the particular occupation; (e) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work; (f) the length of time for which the person is employed; (g) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job; (h) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer; and (i) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relationship of master and servant.

In Cushman v. Bernick, 8 N. E. (2d) 446, the legal question was presented the court as follows: Was the driver of a motor truck, which caused damage, being operated by an employe or independent contractor? This court said:

"The vital test in determining whether a person employed to do a certain work is an independent contractor or a mere servant, is the right to control over the work reserved by the employer. If you find from the evidence that defendant (employer) did not have the right to control and did not control Fitzgerald's (driver's) actions, then your verdict must be for defendant (employer)."

In other words, if an employer furnishes a truck to an employe at a stated rental, and the driver pays the expenses of operating the truck and receives an agreed amount per job or per mile or per tonnage, and the employer has no control over the employe except to instruct him where to make deliveries, then the driver is an independent contractor and the employer is relieved from liability for the driver's negligence.

Warehouses Praised By War Department

As a matter of record, we quote below in part, a letter by Brig. Gen. Carl A. Hardigg, Office Quartermaster General, War Department, Washington, D. C., mailed to refrigerated warehouses in the United States servicing the army directly or storing for commercial concerns which provide the War Department with supplies of perishable foods.

"Your plant, together with many others in the refrigerated warehousing industry, has been called upon to freeze and store substantial quantities of perishable food products for the use of the armed forces. The industry has responded to this call with a fine spirit of cooperation, in many instances rendering service materially beyond that customarily performed.

"These services, both to the War Department direct and to the numerous contractors furnishing perishable supplies, are vitally important to the safe and orderly movement of the merchandise. You may therefore be justifiably proud of your activities in this connection.

"Increasing need for your cooperative effort is indicated. The necessity for meeting shipping schedules cannot be over-emphasized. Peak conditions arise continually, but these problems must be met with the usual American ability to do the 'impossible.' "

Charges of Storage Jams Resented By Government Food Agencies Named

Locker Plants

Frozen food locker plants with compartments for private families are available in 4,600 communities in 46 states, and handle about half a billion pounds of meat, fruits and vegetables a year. Of the total amount of all meat now processed, no more than three-quarters of one per cent actually passes through locker plants.

There are now approximately 1,500,000 individual lockers. If 500 lb. of meat are stored in each locker per year (a high figure) the total is 750 million lb. against a production figure of 22 billion lb. consumed annually.

At the national convention at Des Moines, Ia., in '43, estimates of this great, new postwar industry found a belief that there will be a $25 million immediate market for products entering the field, and that the second year will be far greater. It is an urban as well as a small town project. It is not a war rationing "baby" authorities say.

Senator Aiken, of Vermont, has predicted that the country can eventually use 50,000 plants. One other prediction put the figure at 10,000 new plants in the next three years.

Charges that jammed food storage warehouses are threatening the nation's transportation facilities, made recently by officials of the Office of Defense Transportation, are reported to be resented by officials of other governmental agencies, notably the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration.

Rail movements are being slowed with refrigerator cars remaining on sidings unable to unload their cargoes, a report on the situation disclosed. Huge government set-asides in meat, butter, eggs, fruits and vegetables, and cheese are the main cause of the congestion, and in addition to occupying needed refrigerated space are on the verge of spoiling as a result of being held too long, it was alleged.

WFA officials are reported to resent what they call unfair implications that foodstuffs are spoiling because of improper warehousing, while OPA authorities maintain that ODT officials should have known that the price agency had nothing to do with the storage of foodstuffs and should not have included that agency in the official letter which was sent out.

WFA is said to be annoyed by the implication that the government has a hoard of foodstuffs. The WFA has been releasing canned goods recently in substantial quantities, but this has been done, it is said, because the new 1943 pack of fruits and vegetables made it possible to release goods held from 1942 as an emergency store.

More than 9,000,000 cases of grapefruit juice, peaches, peas, string beans and tomato catsup have been turned into civilian channels in recent weeks. More than 10,000,000 lb. of dried beans have been released to civivlians, they said.

Replying to charges that foodstuffs are being allowed to spoil because of poor storage facilities at coastal shipping points and elsewhere, FDA officials denied that such conditions exist, so far as governmental stocks of foods are concerned.

The ODT, they added, inquired about storage facilities for butter, frozen eggs, frozen fruits and vegetables and meats. So far as meats and butter are concerned, they said, there is no spoilage, although there are large seasonal stocks of butter, acquired during the Spring for use during the Winter, in storage.

Cold Storage Space Now 89% Occupied —Operators Urged to Pile Stocks Higher

Ways of coping with the heavy demand on freezer space, particularly for meats, which will exist during the next four or five months were discussed by the Refrigerated Warehousing Industry Advisory Committee of the Food Distribution Administration at a recent meeting in Chicago, the War Food Administration reports.

Wartime conditions have greatly increased the demand for refrigerated space—particularly "freezer" space, which is now 89 per cent occupied. Cooler occupancy is reported as about 77 per cent. With the industry's peak season for freezer commodities now coming on, it was said that requirements during the months immediately ahead would be very much heavier.

To meet the demand, the committee recommended that, wherever labor and other conditions made it feasible, cold-storage warehouse operators: (1) pile stored commodities higher in freezer rooms; (2) where possible operate "cooler rooms" (which ordinarily lower the temperature only to about 30 deg. F.) as freezer rooms by running the refrigerating machines faster; and (3) convert some existing cooler space into freezer space by installing additional insulation and refrigerating machines.

In discussing means of securing materials and labor, FDA officials said the securing of labor was now the more difficult of the two problems. Representatives of the FDA and of the Armed Forces formed definite plans for taking cold-storage space factors into consideration in their food purchase operations.

Committee members, all of whom attended the meeting, are: Vallee O. Appel, Fulton Market Cold Storage Co., Chicago, Ill.; H. A. Gross, Booth Cold Storage Co., St. Louis, Mo.; W. F. Henningsen, Sr., Northwestern Ice & Cold Stor-

Fire Prevention in a Modern QM Depot

Three members of the Charlotte Quartermaster Depot Fire Department, C. O. Baker, A. W. Shue, and W. T. House, with a half-ton 1941 Chevrolet pickup truck, self-equipped, with a 400 gal. champion centrifugal type pump mounted on the front. In the rear is one of the emergency cypress water towers that provide extra water insurance.

GOOD housekeeping is the first step in fire protection, whether for a four-room cottage or a huge warehouse. In the U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps, which, today, probably has more goods in storage than any other single agency ever collected together at any time, good housekeeping is more than a slogan. It is a necessity.

Army supplies cannot be purchased in haphazard fashion. If the American soldier is to receive sufficient supplies at the right place and on time to carry on a victorious war, purchasing must be carried out many months in advance. Supplies must be stored where they will be readily obtainable for shipment whenever needed in this changing global war.

Safe storage of the immense Quartermaster supplies entails a wide program of advance protection against destruction by weather, fire, sabotage, and even of possible enemy attack from the air. There are 22 Depots storing Quartermaster Supplies today, in addition to the warehousing facilities in camps and stations throughout this country and overseas. Typical of the modern QM installation is the Charlotte Quartermaster Depot, Charlotte, N. C., commanded by Col. C. W. Woodward. Set up two years ago as a small subsistence unit stocking only non-perishable food, it has expanded many times. Today, it furnishes clothing, food, general supplies and equipment to thousands of soldiers in training camps throughout the Carolinas, as well as maintaining large stores of material for shipment overseas.

Expansion of the Depot from a single warehouse to a whole colony of mammoth storehouses has called for a similar broadening of the protective plans against fire or other destruction. Following the principle that all fires may be prevented, complete modern fire equipment has been installed to fit the type of supplies stored in each warehouse, and a force of men has been organized and trained in Depot fire prevention.

Originally set up two years ago under Maj. Arthur G. Odell, Jr., formerly Post Engineer, the fire protection program is now directed by Capt. Winfield S. Dee, Post Engineer and Fire Marshal. Within this department, Fire Chief Willis M. Linder and his staff work 365 days a year, with two 24-hour shifts maintaining a never-ending daily vigil.

To date, there have never been any destructive fires, a record worth far more than any dramatic experience to be gained from dealing with one. A live file of all current printed material on fire prevention is kept and drawn on for new ideas, new equipment, or anything that may seal up another entrance against destruction. Membership in the National Fire Protection Assn., International Assn. of Fire Chiefs, Southeastern Assn. of Fire Chiefs, and National Board of Fire Underwriters gives Chief Linder the releases and other current information on new developments in the field. The fire alarm system is organized with 35 manual boxes and bells set up on four circuits throughout the reservation. When one alarm is pulled, all bells sound off. In addition to the regular staff of the fire department, an emergency fire brigade of warehouse employes receive regular training and drills in fire fighting.

The water system of the Depot is tied in with the municipal water supply of the city of Charlotte, with 12-in. mains running through the entire reservation, supplying water to 10-in. branch systems. Each water "circuit" is complete, since the pipes go all the way around each warehouse. In the event of a main blowing up at one end during a fire, the water could be fed in from the other side. At key points, standard 6-in. yard hydrants are set up, with 4½-in. national standard steamer connections on each hydrant. Along with the yard hydrants, there are numerous 2½-in. wall-mounted hydrants on the railroad platforms, and inside the warehouses.

Towering over the main building of the Depot is a large water tower that could be drawn on, and an additional water storage tank is buried in a concealed spot in the center of the reservation. Recently, several new cypress tanks were set up at strategic points throughout the Depot, to provide emergency protection during air raids in the event that regular water lines and hydrants were destroyed. However, the primary fire prevention program is based on the use of the regular water facilities, with thousands of feet of hose ready for immediate use, and special hand-drawn hose carts set for any emergency.

All types of special extinguishers are kept in condition for immediate use against all classes of fires: Class A—wood, textiles, rubbish, etc.; Class B—oils, greases; Class C—electrical equipment; Class D—mobile equipment, trucks, scooters. The modern Quartermaster Depot is heavily stocked with all kinds of items that cover all of these classes, with each one requires special fire prevention equipment.

Forty-gallon wheel-mounted foam extinguishers furnish protection for the 10,000 gal. gasoline storage tank that supplies fuel for trucks, autos, tractors, and other mobile equipment of the Depot. In an emergency, a foam extinguisher could be turned on the mobile equipment itself, although each vehicle also carries a one-quart carbon tetrachloride hand extinguisher.

Like the soldier at the front, who goes armed with a mask against the danger of gas, the Charlotte Quartermaster Depot has an all-out program of protection against enemy air attacks. It is to be hoped that gas will never be used on the fighting fronts, and it is also to be hoped that army

Protective equipment in any bay of a modern QM warehouse. Fire Chief Linder of the Charlotte Quartermaster Depot, together with E. G. Untz and W. C. Hooks of the fire-fighting staff, exhibit the vital air raid items housed in each bay: a 4 gal. pump-type extinguisher, sand box, 14 qt. water bucket, wrecking bar, pick-headed fire ax, 50 gal. water barrel, ladder, and hand drawn hose carrier.

installations in continental United States will never be bombed by enemy aircraft. Yet advance preparation in both cases is insurance well taken. As Chief Air Raid Warden, Fire Chief Linder has directed a series of classes among Depot employes on first aid, gas, and incendiaries, with lectures by specialists and training films on each subject furnished by the Army.

The reservation has been divided into eight areas. Each has a coordinator to direct personnel assigned for air raid protection. Each warehouse bay is provided with two fire parties; two air raid wardens and four fire watchers in each. In the event of a blackout during the night Quartermaster officers assigned to the Charlotte Depot, and selected employes assigned to specific posts, take their stations just as they would if an air raid were actually to take place. With millions of dollars worth of vital army supplies in storage, every precaution must be taken.

Air Raid equipment in each warehouse bay includes a hand drawn hose cart, sand box, 14 qt. water bucket, a wrecking bar, a long handled square-pointed shovel, a pick-headed fire axe, a ladder, an electric lantern, and a 50-gal. water barrel. The trained air raid personnel know their incendiaries and the means of combatting each.

Symbolic of the coordination between the Charlotte Depot and civilian defense activities within the city of Charlotte, the siren atop the 30 ft. tower on Warehouse 1 has recently been connected with the general air raid alarm system of the Office of Civilian Defense in the area.

Regular drills keep the fire-fighting staff on its toes. A comfortable firehouse, including a lounging room where the men may play games or read in the few periods of time given over to relaxation provides an extremely important morale factor. Timely information, memos and bulletins put out by Col. C. W. Woodward the commanding officer, keep all officers and civilian employes alive to the importance of the prevention program and the dangers of fire.

Automatically, when a worker enters a warehouse, he extinguishes his cigarette, not simply because he's read one of the huge signs "No Smoking" that are posted everywhere, but because he has been trained to do it instinctively, as a part of his job. It is just as important as the job of warehousing and issuing Quartermaster supplies, which, today are prime factors in the national war effort.

Safety Rules for Freight Elevators

Ten Commandments for Safe Operation Enumerated By Industrial Insurance Expert of Chicago Firm

THE operation of freight elevators creates many hazardous conditions often overlooked or neglected, according to A. F. Swanson, of Swift & Co.'s Chicago insurance department. Of outstanding interest to warehousemen and industrial users of freight elevators is the new decalog or set of 10 commandments which Mr. Swanson proposes for conservation of manpower and for reducing injuries and fatalities in elevator accidents. They are as follows:

1. No one shall operate the elevator unless he has been properly instructed and has been authorized by the management to do so.

2. Before start of each work day, a test run shall be made by a person authorized to see that everything is in safe operating condition.

3. The elevator shall not be placed in motion until all shaftway doors and safety gates are closed. The operator shall make sure that all doors and gates are securely latched so that they cannot be opened from outside the shaft when the car is away from the landing. The operator shall be the only person to open and close the doors or gates and other persons riding on the car shall refrain from such practice.

4. The load on the elevator must be safely placed and must not exceed the posted capacity. Passengers must stand a safe distance from open side of car. No passengers, other than employees, shall be carried, except by special permission of the management.

5. The management must be notified promptly of any safety devices that are out of order or of any unusual or unsafe conditions which develop.

6. The elevator must be left at the lowest landing at the close of the day's work. Authorized operators must lock the car controls any time they leave the car to prevent operation by unauthorized persons.

7. Elevators operated by means of a hand cable must not be placed in motion from outside the shaftway. The operator must be on the car.

8. The car must be clean and well lighted.

9. The shaftway pit must be clean and free from water.

10. No one shall enter the shaftway pit unless the car controls have been made inoperative and the car blocked to prevent its accidental descent.

"We seldom hear of a car dropping in the shaftway because of a failure in the hoisting cable," he says, "but it is a common occurrance to hear of persons stepping into an elevator shaft because doors or safety gates were not closed and latched before the car was placed in motion. Defective and flimsy door latches account for similar occurrances. The complete protection of door openings to shaftways warrants close attention. Existing protection will often be found deficient in design, operation and maintenance."

Shearing projections, door recesses and excessive clearance in shaftway walls facing open sides of elevator cars were listed as other hazards of a most serious nature. They may be overcome, he suggested by installation and proper operation of standard type car riding safety gates equipped with electric interlocks, or eliminated by reconstructing shaftway walls to present a smooth, unbroken wall, preferably two inches away from the

Hollow Axles

Perfect balance in the 260 lb. of weight saved by a new type of hollow railroad axle being produced by the Pittsburgh Steel Co., Allenport, Pa., is demonstrated by Elaine Robins and Thelma Wanko, company employees, as a crane is used to form a huge scale. The girls are seated on the new type axle which will save more than half a ton of war-needed steel on each freight car now using the heavier type of solid axle suspended at the far end of the beam.

Air Imports Last Year Valued at $116,209,000

Approximately 6 per cent by value of all materials imported into the United States during 1943 came by air, according to a statement made by Donald Nelson, chairman, War Production Board. The volume imported was 41,000,000 lbs., and the value $116,209,000.

"During 1943," Mr. Nelson said, "a unit of air cargo was 1,381 times smaller, 81 times as valuable, about 20 times as safe and moved more than six times faster than cargo on ocean vessels."

Materials imported included such war essentials as mica, quartz crystals, industrial diamonds, tantalite, beryl and rare drugs.

It was possible to import so large and valuable an amount of air cargo, Mr. Nelson said, because the United States is currently producing more cargo-carrying aircraft in one month than were in use on all of its airlines before it entered the war.

THOMAS TRUCK of Keokuk

Make the Truck Fit the Job—

Not the Job Fit the Truck

This series 3400 round cornered truck will fit 80% of all jobs because it can be equipped with the superstructure your load requires.

There is a set of conditions in your plant dictating the type of truck chassis you should buy. The loads to be carried on these trucks frequently require special consideration if handling costs are to be held down. Analyze your plant and the load, specify one of the 20 Thomas chassis, then one of the 1000 Thomas superstructures. They fit! The combination will result in a "job-suited" truck that will handle your load far more efficiently.

- Frame: Heavy 2" thick hardwood plank stock
- Deck: Smooth seasoned 1" hardwood
- Pockets: Heavy steel two way locked, bolted
- Superstructures: Removable or screw-locked
- 10 Standard Platform Sizes
- Wheels: Molded-on Rubber or Semi-Steel
- Hyatt Bearings, Hardened Races, Grease Fittings

OVER 1000 DIFFERENT SUPERSTRUCTURES

Mid-West Terminal Warehouse Co. Joins Allied Distribution Group

Mid-West Terminal Warehouse Co., Kansas City, has joined the chain of warehouses associated with Allied Distribution, Inc., Chicago, W. D. Leet, president, Allied Distribution has announced.

Mid-West Terminal Warehouse Co. is a new firm in the warehousing industry, Mr. Leet stated, although the personnel and facilities have been operating for sometime. The new project, it was stated in the announcement, is controlled by the St. Louis Terminal Warehouse Co., A. L. Ford, president, and will be managed by Morris Stern, who formerly was operating executive of the Walnut Warehouse Co., Kansas City, one of the warehouses recently taken over by Mr. Ford.

In addition to the former Walnut property, the new firm has the adjacent buildings, formerly occupied by the Johns-Manville Co., and also other space in the central manufacturing district.

Fifty fighting planes can use up 300,000 rounds of ammunition in one minute. One whole division of 10,000 men in Napoleon's army would not have used that much ammunition in a day's battle.

Each time American troops go into action, large quantities of weapon replacements are needed. For example, when we send 100 men overseas with 100 rifles, the Ordnance Department must ship 5 extra rifles each.

While there are daily and monthly fluctuations in the number of shipments for each state the month of April, 1939, was fairly representative of the current flow of air express shipments at that time and therefore fairly indicative generally.

loading edge of the car, with doors of solid construction set flush with the inside of the shaftway wall.

Automatic elevators of the push button type, operated from the car or floor landing, he suggests should include car riding safety gates equipped with electric interlocks on all open sides of cars.

Lifting heavy objects and the tendency to overload hand trucking equipment, Mr. Swanson believes, is responsible for many preventable accidents. Thorough instruction in the proper manner of lifting and using mechanical means wherever warranted are steps in the right direction, he says.

Restricting the size of loads on hand trucks must be carefully followed, he suggests, adding, "Maintaining hand trucks in good repair is too often overlooked and the floor surfaces over which they travel are usually badly worn. The installation of finger guards on the handles of all hand trucks is a valuable safety feature. They should be promptly restored when found missing or broken."

"There are hazards common to all industries," he says, "and, of course, we all have our share of them. It behooves us all to be keenly conscious of our responsibilities and to be forever on the alert in the prompt detection and correction of hazardous conditions that are a menace to life and property." (Slawson).

Braddock Avenue, Pittsburgh, manufacturer of mine and industrial safety appliances, has acquired the building at 6101 Falls Road, Baltimore, Md., which it is enlarging and equipping as its main experimental laboratory, with O. G. Bennett as resident director. In addition to other improvements, a one-story laboratory addition, 30 by 100 ft., is being erected, also a mixing barricade. (Ignace).

approximately 11,000 railroad cars of subsistence were handled by depots. Approximately two and one-half hours are required to load and unload a car, thus involving 27,500 man hours for checkers. Eliminating these hours by combining the duties of checker and operator would save approximately $20,000 per month on the basis of average pay of 75c. per hour.

This operation has been approved by the Storage Branch, Storage and Distribution Division, Office of The Quartermaster General insofar as Quartermaster warehousing procedures are concerned. The Civilian Personnel Branch, Personnel Division, has approved the position of operator-checker with a classification one grade higher than the present designation of fork-truck operator. All classification analysts have been acquainted with this classification and job description covering this position, and the salary has been set high enough to attract competent people.

By combining the positions many checkers can be utilized in some other capacity in warehouse operations, where additional employes are urgently needed. The dual position is by no means limited to the handling of subsistence, and may be used in numerous other sections where such combined activities are practicable.

New York Warehouses To Expand Freezer Space

Major warehouse interests in New York City have taken steps to expand freezer capacity by at least 10,000,000 cu. ft., as part of a program to ease storage and transportation problems caused by government wartime requirements.

The local office of the Food Distribution Administration, disclosed that a survevy of storage facilities had shown New York City warehouses are operating at 89 per cent of capacity.

"When we are operating at 90 to 95 per cent of capacity," explained an executive of the Merchants Refrigeration Co., "we figure we are operating at the limit."

This same spokesman for the industry explained further that the plan to add 1,000,000 cu. ft. of freezer capacity contemplated no new construction but "conversion from cooler to freezer space."

Moves

The Globe Venetian Blind Mfg. Co. has moved from 220 W. Ostend St. to 2012-28 East Federal St., Baltimore, Md., where it will occupy a structure containing some 10,000 sq. ft. (Ignace).

Moving Stored Goods

Question: Due to the existing war conditions, we have been compelled to rent additional warehousing space, most of these rentals for the period of the duration, and we are wondering just what our position will be when this storage starts moving out and we attempt to move some of these lots back into our main warehouse, so that these extra buildings can be released. We are wondering what our liability would be if we remove these goods from the given location as shown in the warehouse receipt to the main building without giving notice to the owner. No doubt similar cases have arisen, and we are wondering if your files indicate any legal decision in similar cases?

Also the question presents itself whether or not we have the right to move the goods from one location within a given warehouse to another location in the same warehouse without serving notice on the customer and receiving his permission to so move the goods.

Any information you may have available in your files on these two matters will be greatly appreciated. American Transfer and Storage Co.

Answer: According to many higher court decisions a warehouseman becomes liable practically as an insurer if he moves goods from one warehouse to another, without permission of the owner of such goods.

In fact, decisions are on record in which the higher courts have held warehousemen liable for loss of goods by fire where the testimony proved that without consent of the owner the warehousemen moved the goods from an agreed location to a new location in the same warehouse building.

On the other hand, a few courts have held that if the warehouseman proves that the loss would have occurred notwithstanding the goods had not been moved, such warehouseman may stand to win a favorable verdict. Generally, such decisions are distinctly in favor of the owner of stored goods.

Night Watchman

Question: We read in the September issue of D and W, pg. 35, regarding the night watchman services and the application of wages to the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act. You explain the case of Southern Corp. v. Walton, 11 So. (2d) 912. Will you please tell us what court rendered the decision and the state? Poston Storage Warehouses.

Answer: The state decision is not important. If a watchman is employed to perform interstate duties he must be paid wages specified by the Fair Labor Standards Act. If he merely "watches" the premises he need not be paid Federal wages specified under the Fair Labor Standards Act. However, if he keeps up fires in boilers, or otherwise assists in duties which contribute to his employer's interstate relationship the employe is entitled to wages specified by this federal law.

Many decisions have been reported in D and W on this law. Please explain your case in detail and we shall advise you.

Night Watchman's Services

Question: Our night watchman has been with us for several years, his duties were to watch the premises outside of building, pull two boxes per hour, and not have any duties inside of building whatever. But for five months of this year he did have rounds to make inside of the building.

We do not have steam heat or boilers of any kind that needed his attention, he has nothing to do but make rounds of the building and pull two boxes each hour.

The majority of our business is interstate, but warehouse is closed at night, and watchman does not have duties connected with any interstate production as we manufacture nothing whatever and he has no duties in checking, shipping in any interstate movements.

The regional wage and hour board have recently made a decision that our watchman was in the employ of a company that did a majority of its business interstate and awarded our watchman wages for back time.

Shall appreciate your reply and what courts have made decisions regarding night watchmen in other warehouses over the United States. Poston Storage Warehouses.

Answer: A late case on this subject is 48 N. E. (2d) 482. Here the court held a porter who cleaned a building, whose owner was engaged in interstate commerce, not entitled to wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act. This law distinctly provides that such employe must handle, process, or assist in production of goods shipped in interstate commerce.

AWA'S Wartime Activities

For over 50 years the American Warehousemen's Assn. has been the national trade organization for the public merchandise and refrigerated warehousing industries. Since the war, it has helped staff government agencies at home and abroad with men who know warehousing, and in various ways has done much to facilitate the storage and transportation of vast quantities of commodities essential for the armed forces and civilian supply.

Wilson V. Little

By WILSON V. LITTLE
General Secretary
American Warehousemen's Assn.

o o o

BEING an integral part of the country's distributive economy, it was to be expected that the public merchandise and refrigerated warehousing industries would be among the earliest to be called into service under our country's national defense and war programs. Months before Pearl Harbor, merchandise and refrigerating warehousemen were devoting their facilities increasingly to defense and war needs. Today, the handling of war storage requirements is the major part of the business of most of them.

For over 50 years the American Warehousemen's Assn. has functioned as the national trade association for these two branches of the warehousing business. In peace and in war it has undertaken to represent the public merchandise and refrigerated warehousing industries on innumerable matters in furtherance of the public interest.

Countless Problems

When the nation's national defense program was inaugurated, AWA's two divisions, the merchandise division, and the National Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses, the cold storage division, placed themselves at the disposal of the government to help facilitate the performance of the work expected of merchandise and refrigerating warehousemen. At the same time, they prepared their respective industries for the job they inevitably would be called on to do in the national interest. From then to the present moment, AWA's two divisions have had superimposed upon their normal, peacetime activities the routine necessary for handling countless wartime industry problems and for providing close contact with government agencies seeking or giving advice on warehousing matters.

More specifically, certain government agencies had to be staffed with men who know warehousing. Numerous warehousing industry advisory committees had to be appointed. The army needed hundreds of warehouse officers. The navy wanted, and still needs, supply officers. In several instances, AWA's divisional offices were asked for help, with the result that hundreds of merchandise and refrigerating warehousemen are now in government civil and military service at home and throughout the globe.

Numerous Surveys

Numerous surveys of available warehousing facilities have had to be made. Lists of all known warehousemen have had to be furnished this or that government agency. Current occupancy statistics have had to be prepared. AWA's divisional offices have not only been consulted about various government projects but they have done much of the mechanical work involved in them.

Then there are the various governmental controls that our wartime economy has imposed upon business men and the necessity of keeping members currently advised with respect to the constantly changing regulations thereunder. Releases to members from AWA's divisional offices have dealt exhaustively with these price, wage, priority, and other controls as they affect warehousemen. Naturally, too, these regulations are the subjects of frequent personal interviews and much correspondence.

Washington Offices

Last May AWA's Merchandise Division established an office at Washington, D. C., and in August the National Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses moved its headquarters to that city from Chicago. Both of these steps were taken to facilitate handling the mutual interests of the government and the merchandise and refrigerated warehousing industries. These arrangements have proved beneficial, too, to member companies having individual problems with government agencies at Washington, the solution of which can often be expedited by the services that AWA's divisional offices in Washington can render in connection with them.

New Problems

What has been said above suggests quite broadly and sketchily the added fields in which AWA's two divisions have been functioning in furtherance of their industries' collaboration with government in the winning of the war.

However, hostilities will cease some time and the nation will again revert to a peacetime economy. Already it is clearly seen that the post-war adjustment period will bring with it some new problems for warehousemen, as for other lines of business. Even now both of AWA's divisions are looking ahead and making plans for safeguarding and promoting the welfare of their respective industries when and after V-day comes.

Warehouse Conventions

WAR-TIME industry conferences will be held at Chicago in February by the three national warehouse associations. The conventions of the three organizations will follow the pattern established last year, and the meetings will be held one after the other at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

The Mayflower Warehousemen's Assn. will hold its convention Feb. 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The American Warehousemen's Assn. will meet Feb. 16, 17 and 18. The National Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses, a division of AWA, will meet at the same time.

The National Furniture Warehousemen's Assn. will hold its convention Feb. 21, 22 and 23.

Train and hotel reservations should be made as early as possible.

New Refrigeration Research Foundation Augurs Well for Future of Industry

Establishment of Foundation as non-pecuniary corporation, with H. C. Diehl as director, considered most important development in cold storage industry in many years.

THE establishment of The Refrigeration Research Foundation at Chicago last fall by the cold storage industry, chiefly by members of the National Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses, a division of the American Warehousemen's Assn., is considered both by users and operators of cold storage plants as probably the most important development in the refrigerated warehousing field in recent years.

The Refrigerated Research Foundation is a non-pecuniary corporation. It was incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois on Oct. 14, 1943, with G. D. Allman, V. O. Appel and J. R. Shoemaker as incorporators. The first formal organization meeting of the original Board of Directors (later Board of Governors) was held Oct. 18 with G. D. Allman, E. G. Erickson and V. O. Appel present. J. Arthur Miller, attorney, acted as secretary pro tem.

Chicago, Nov. 18

On Nov. 18, at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, the Foundation began to form into a living organization. Interest in activating the Foundation was evidenced by subscriptions totaling $135,000 from 28 companies. These subscriptions came from some of the great metropolitan warehouses as well as the smallest of one-crop apple storage plants. There were three substantial pledges, two of $25,000 each from large eastern corporations and one of $20,000 from a midwestern chain.

As stated in a brochure that has been prepared to assist those interested in refrigeration to understand the scope of the Foundation's plan:

"The Foundation derives its support from voluntary subscriptions by any corporation, firm or individual engaged in the preservation of food or other commodities by refrigeration.

"The Foundation plan has the enthusiastic endorsement of prominent scientists and leaders in the refrigerated warehousing industry of the United States.

Basic Functions

"The Foundation's purposes are:

"1. To improve the methods of refrigeration for the better preservation of food and other commodities essential to the health and welfare of the American people.

"2. To develop and support research in the science and art of refrigeration of food and other commodities through a nationwide program of financial grants to established institutions and agencies of research.

"3. To establish fellowship in institutions and agencies of research and thereby to aid in the training of competent personnel to give activation and leadership to the refrigeration of commodities essential to the national economy.

"4. To establish in the interest of the American people a repository of scientific information relating to the refrigeration of food and other materials.

"5. To cooperate with and aid agencies of Federal and State governments, institutions of research and others in connection with their scientific and educational work involving the refrigeration of food and other products.

"The Foundation will not engage in any business or activity customarily performed for profit nor will it engage in any political activity or carry on propaganda or attempt to influence legislation.

Other Functions

"Beside aiding specific and approved research projects with grants of funds, the Foundation (1) will serve as a clearing house for scientific information useful to the refrigerated warehousing and allied industries; (2) may publish or aid in publishing authoritative, carefully edited and unbiased review of current literature and technical information in the field of refrigeration of commodities; (3) will aid individual refrigerated warehouse operators, insofar as possible, in solving specific problems of operation by bringing to bear on these problems the attention of the best qualified research workers in the particular field; (4) will encourage young men and women to train themselves for undertaking the profession and business of refrigeration of commodities; and (5) will be alert to scientific and economic developments touching upon or affecting the refrigeration of commodities as well as to new uses for refrigeration in many new fields.

Benefits from Program

"The supporting firms, agencies or individuals benefit (1) in a general way as a result of the development of the science and art in which they are interested; (2) by the improvement and extension in the refrigeration of commodities through (a) development of better or more economical practices of design, construction and operation, (b) by applying refrigeration to new commodities and uses, and (c) by retaining through such refrigeration more of the valuable and desired qualities of commodities; (3) in the availability for industrial leadership and service of well trained scientific personnel in the engineering, operating or commodity phases, with a background of experience and investigation in the science and art of refrigeration of commodities; and (4) in the value of better service to the American people by the efficient refrigeration of commodities essential to the health and economic life of the nation."

Officers

Officers elected to serve until the first annual meeting of the Foundation in Feb., 1944 are: Chairman of the Board of Governors, Dr. Samuel C. Prescott, former Dean of Science and Professor Emeritus, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.; President, R. M. Hagen, Los Angeles, Cal.; Vice-President, A. T. Hampson, Providence, R. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, G. D. Allman, Chicago, Ill.

Diehl Chosen Director

The Executive Committee has selected H. C. Diehl, Principal Chemist and Chief, Commodity Processing Division, Western Regional Research Laboratory, Albany, Calif., to act as Director of the Foundation.

For almost 25 years, Mr. Diehl has been actively engaged in research and in the administration of research having to do with the refrigeration of commodities. His pioneering work in the preservation of foods by freezing, beginning in the Pacific Northwest in

Federal Emergency Warehouse System Has Demonstrated Its Value

Cumulative total of 41,294,000 sq. ft. of private warehouse space in 32 cities made available for government storage ODT reports.

HROUGH the group warehousing plan of the Federal Emergency Warehouse Assns., the Office of Defense Transportation made available to certain Government procurement agencies a cumulative total of 41,294,000 sq. ft. of private warehouse storage space in 32 cities during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, an ODT statement reveals.

Currently more than 50 per cent of all available public merchandise warehouse space in the major storage centers is occupied by government property received either on FEWA contract or on contracts made directly between government procurement agencies and individual warehouse operators, the statement adds.

On FEWA contracts 22,931 carloads of government-owned property were handled during the fiscal year and at its end 15,990 carloads were in storage, occupying approximately 6,500,000 sq. ft. of space in association warehouses. Space available on the first and the 15th of each month in the pooled facilities of each of the FEWA units is reported to all government procurement agencies by the ODT Division of Storage, and the procurement agencies are guided by the current space availability in allocating their materials for storage.

Out of the total facilities available, the government acquired during the period, through leases arranged by the ODT Division of Storage, 1,063,281 sq. ft. of space in 12 buildings in eight cities, which averaged out over the year to 648,100 leased square feet per month at a total annual net cost to the Government of $104,358.16, or 16.1c. per sq. ft. per annum. As operations expanded, their unit cost declined until, in the quarter ending June 30, the cost of the 1,006,615 sq. ft. then under lease was but 2.15c. per sq. ft. for the quarter, equivalent to an annual net cost of 8.6c. per sq. ft.

In reporting to the Office of Lend-Lease Administration the year's accomplishments under the FEWA plan, Col. L. M. Nicolson, director, ODT Division of Storage, revealed that use of the plan by the War Department alone had been equivalent to saving approximately 5,000,000 sq. ft. of new construction.

Col. Nicolson pointed out that the plan provided 32 storage and distributing centers, each with quickly expansible space, at which great quantities of materials could be stored and prompt delivery made to a given port or destination without running the risk of serious loss by fire or sabotage that might occur in heavy concentrations of such materials in a single place.

He credited to the FEWA plan an important part in the prevention of storage congestion in the elimination of back-hauls and out-of-line freight movements and in the reduction of car detention for loading and unloading, all of which have been strong factors in enabling the carriers to cope with wartime transportation loads.

Col. Nicolson praised the warehouse industry and participating government departments and agencies for their cooperation in making the FEWA plan a success. He explained that the basic plan provided for increasing the total storage capacity of any locality by authorizing the leasing of additional buildings, containing up to 10 per cent of the pooled floor area of facilities operated by the local association members, whenever occupancy of their pooled facilities reached 85 per cent of capacity. Such leasing would give a government-held cushion of storage space amounting to 25 per cent of total local storage capacity, he said, adding:

"In actual FEWA operations, additional buildings have been leased only when 95 per cent of occupancy of local pooled capacity was reached, and then only to the extent of 5 per cent of the total capacity, thus saving the government substantial sums in building rentals while providing a cushion of government-held space amounting to 10 per cent of total capacity.

"The ability to operate successfully on a 10 per cent space margin was made possible by the practice of the War Department, Treasury procurement and other participating government agencies in forecasting in ample time their anticipated requirements and by the prompt and accurate reporting of space available by the warehouse industry."

Official evidence of appreciation of warehouse industry cooperation by the government is afforded by a letter addressed to the FEWA by Maj. Gen. F. F. Scowden on behalf of the Quartermaster General.

"It is with pleasure that the War Department takes this opportunity to express its appreciation of the services that you have rendered. You can be justly proud of your contribution," Gen. Scowden wrote.

"For some time to come it may be necessary to place even greater reliance upon commercial warehouses. Action to make available storage space as and when needed by the war effort; strict adherence in shipping schedules; daily notification of shipments to shipping offices; and immediate notification of unforeseen delays in handling supplies will contribute to the successful accomplishment of the supply mission of the War Department."

Although not all government procurement agencies use the FEWA plan as such, its operation is directly helpful to them, the ODT explains, since it enables the individual warehouse members to satisfy the storage requirements of non-participating agencies through the expansion of members' total facilities under the FEWA leased-building program and through the reporting by members of space available.

The FEWA plan is administered by the division of storage, Office of Defense Transportation, through a $1,000,000 revolving fund allocated by the Office of Lend-Lease Administration for that purpose.

Public Warehousing, An "Essential" Industry

WAR DEPARTMENT
ARMY SERVICE FORCES
Office of The Quartermaster General
WASHINGTON

25 September 1943

SPQSD 095

Gentlemen:

Several months ago the War Department was faced with the problem of storing large quantities of materiel for which Government storage space was not available.

Commercial warehousemen were called upon to furnish this additional space, and they responded with a spirit of cooperation that is definitely a credit to the industry.

In many cases, warehousemen accepted supplies for storage before final details of contract negotiations were completed and in every way cooperated by getting the job done instead of limiting themselves to "contract obligations".

These efforts, on the part of the industry, are highly commendable and the services rendered have been of material aid in assisting the War Department in maintaining its supply function to troops, widely scattered throughout the world.

It is with pleasure that the War Department takes this opportunity to express its appreciation of the services that you have rendered. You can be justly proud of your contribution.

For sometime to come it may be necessary to place even greater reliance upon commercial warehouses. Action to make available storage space as and when needed by the war effort; strict adherence in shipping schedules; daily notification of shipments to shipping offices; and immediate notification of unforeseen delays in handling supplies, will contribute to the successful accomplishment of the supply mission of the War Department.

The importance of meeting shipping schedules cannot be over-emphasized. It is realized that occasions will arise when you will be called upon to load out shipments in much less than normal time. Every effort will be made to avoid these situations, but when they do arise, the problem must be met with the usual American ability to make the impossible appear routine.

It is suggested that the contents of this letter be brought to the individual attention of the personnel of your organization as an acknowledgment by the War Department of their contribution to the War effort.

For The Quartermaster General:

Very truly yours,

F. F. Scowden

F. F. SCOWDEN,

Guide for Shippers

ALL listings set in bold face type on the following pages identify those whose advertising you will find also in subsequent monthly issues of D and W. Listings set in light face type identify advertisers in this directory only. Non-advertisers are listed in single lines of light face type.

When you ship by rail, the listings show you the road and station both for carload and l. c. l. shipments, and whether a siding is available.

When you ship by water, the listings show you the body of water, length of dock and other facilities available.

When you ship by truck, the listings show you the responsible motor haulage facilities operated by warehousemen in your own locality, and the motorized equipment available at all points where you may spot your stocks or distribute pool cars.

Your handling problems may be solved by information in the listings pertaining to materials handling and rigging equipment.

Although every precaution and the greatest care have been exercised in the compilation of this directory, the publishers cannot assume responsibility for errors.

CONTROLLED DISTRIBUTION

UNDER the system of controlled distribution, which will surely be used by the far sighted manufacturer as soon as the end of the war puts him back into the consumer goods business again, the manufacturer will not even expect wholesalers and retailers to carry a stock, except for current requirements. Most of these middlemen haven't been doing so for a number of years; most of them have been small-order buyers; most of them have stocked hand-to-mouth; and more and more manufacturers have discovered they have had to carry the stock.

In the post-war era of distribution the manufacturer will warehouse his own stock, not at the factory where such a procedure is bound to be expensive, but in public merchandise warehouses spotted around the country as are the members of The Distributors' News Group. These goods will be warehoused as near to points of sale as possible and will therefore be immediately available for purchase by agencies of effective consumption which may be wholesalers, industrial users, retailers or household consumers themselves.

Quoted from an article by John H. Frederick in the December issue of DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS. If you are not now receiving DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS each month, please send for sample copy without charge.

SENG WATERWAY WAREHOUSE
SENG WATERWAY WAREHOUSE
the largest COMPLETE
WAREHOUSE and DISTRIBUTION
SERVICE IN CHICAGO

WHEN the need for a warehouse arises, one of the primary considerations is the completeness of the service available.

For years Seng has paid particular attention to the development of a plant that can offer manufacturers the type of service they, themselves, would plan to provide in a branch of their own. Today Seng is the largest complete warehousing and distributing service organization in the Chicago area.

The size of the Seng operation and the long list of Seng customers—many leaders in their fields—who have specified Seng Waterway Warehouse over the years, speak well for the way in which we have helped solve their problems of storage and distribution. We can do the same sort of job for you.

When you need a reliable warehouse service in Chicago, discuss the problem with a Seng representative—or write us for an estimate. Of course, there's no obligation whatever.

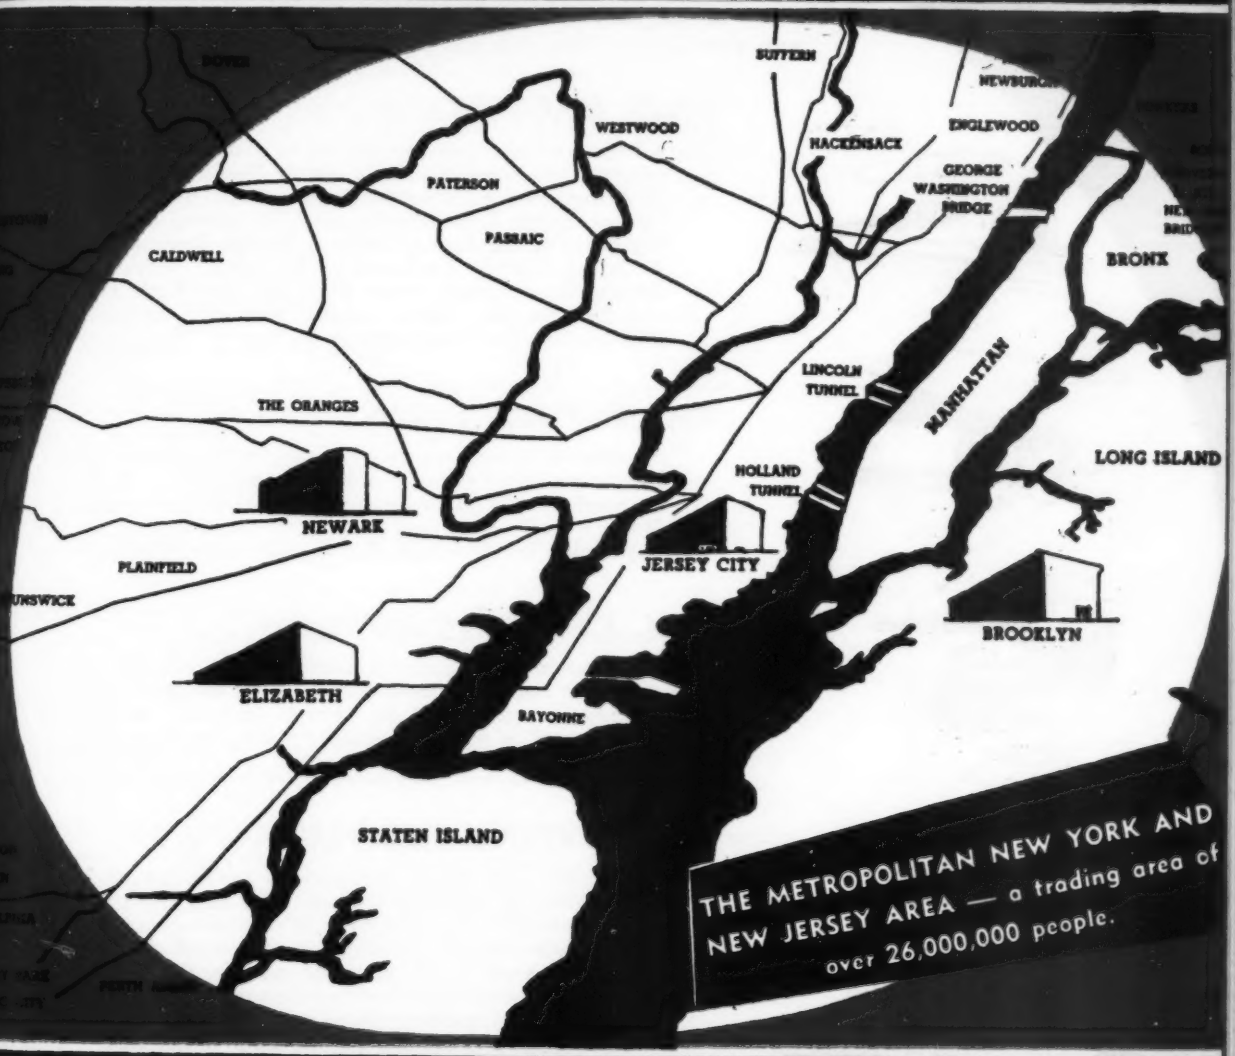
THE DOMINATING FACTORS IN POSTWAR SALES PLANNING



. . . . TO SERVICE THIS NO. 1 MARKET CHOOSE THE NO. 1 WAREHOUSING AND DISTRIBUTION ORGANIZATION

LEHIGH and LACKAWANNA

★ WAREHOUSE ORGANIZATION ★

Strategically located, throughout the New York and New Jersey trading area, are the four modern buildings of the

LEHIGH and LACKAWANNA

★ WAREHOUSE ORGANIZATION ★

This organization offers these distribution facilities as an all important consideration in planning your post-war attack upon this rich marketing center.

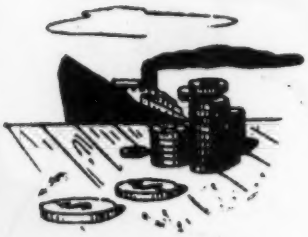
RAIL FACILITIES . . .

All four warehouses are served by major railroads entering this market. Buildings in Elizabeth served by sidings of the Pennsylvania Railroad. At Newark by the Lehigh Valley Railroad. (Reciprocal switching between the Pennsylvania & Lehigh Railroads.) At Jersey City by Lackawanna Railroad. While in Brooklyn, all trunk lines entering New York are switched to our siding by the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal Railroad.

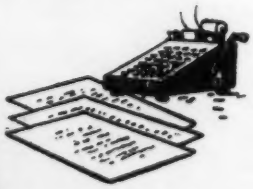
TRANSPORTATION . . .

An efficient store-door delivery service is maintained by our own fleet of modern high speed trucks. Each manned by skilled and courteous distribution men. Major over-the-road carriers pick up and deliver each day at our four terminals, for shipments to all points.



U. S. CUSTOMS BONDED . . .

Temperature controlled rooms for the storage of sparkling and still wines. Permanently assigned government storekeeper in charge—bonded trucks make possible one responsibility for the thorough handling of imported merchandise.



ACCOUNTING SERVICES . . .

A complete, perpetual inventory of customers stock is recorded in each warehouse. We also maintain for our clients—customers credit control—invoicing with shipments—C. O. D. Collections—depositing in clients local bank accounts against their next day drafts—collection service—financing shipments for buyers and sellers—issuing of negotiable warehouse receipts—International banking affiliations.

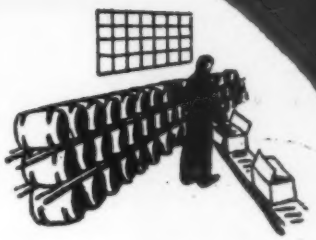
MERCHANDISING SERVICE . . .

We can deliver from stock and install dealer sales of household, office and industrial appliances. Facilities for weighing, packaging and labeling of bulk shipments. Also distribution of merchandise to tie in with specific sales promotion programs. Personnel to operate intelligently, replacement part stock rooms.

Buy War Bonds

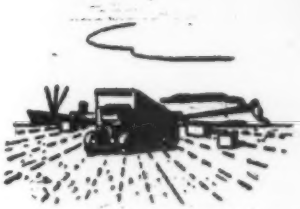
U. S. INTERNAL REVENUE BONDED

Ideal storage for the ageing of whiskies and brandies —100,000 barrel capacity. Sufficient number of Federal storekeepers and gaugers to expedite delivery. Facilities for trained personnel to supervise daily cooperage, rotating the barrels, weighing for tare, tax paying and shipping. We operate our own complete bottling department manned by experienced employees.



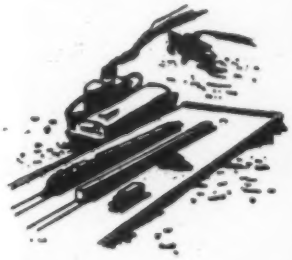
STORAGE IN TRANSIT . . .

Especially adapted for consignments of merchandise in transit—whether it is merchandise entering via the New York Harbor for distribution throughout the entire country, or pool car shipments arriving from the west for distribution throughout the entire eastern seaboard—perhaps for reshipment to foreign markets.



DOCK FACILITIES . . .

A private dock at the Brooklyn Warehouse for lighters and barges. Protected receiving shed. Fifteen feet of water at bulkhead.



SALES OR SERVICE OFFICE . . .

Attractive office accommodations are available for clients who are desirous of close cooperation between their warehouse stock and their branch sales or service departments.

Unveiling Tomorrow's Air Packaging—TODAY

Here at The Manhattan Storage and Warehouse Co., the handling of goods of the highest value, demanding utmost care and precaution, has been a consummate craft of long development. This long and successful experience is the background for packing any commodity traveling by air, from specialized merchandise to drugs . . . packaged scientifically-light yet with the utmost degree of safety.

It is natural that The Manhattan, planning for the age of air cargo, should be in the vanguard, placing at the disposal of a (for the moment) limited number of shippers, the most modern type of packaging for air shipment. Accomplishing Today what others plan for Tomorrow.

Into The Manhattan packaging goes all the skill and know-how that generations of New Yorkers have always used. Let us tell you more of the value of this forward-looking service.

. . and war WILL end—

Thru the difficult days of war, we've been setting ourselves the task of meeting every demand upon our facilities with the same zeal for service that has made The Cotter City View Storage Co. a leader.

Though specializing in rubber accounts, we've kept our household goods and merchandise departments in top form—aiding personnel and business moving necessitated by the war emergency, handling needed merchandise in our vitally important production area.

But the war WILL end—and we've planned for greater service than ever for our clients and customers-to-be. Our operations for the rubber industry will be on an even greater scale than at present. Our service in and out of Akron will be improved and expanded.

The dawn of Victory will find Cotter City View Storage Co. ready.

May we help you?

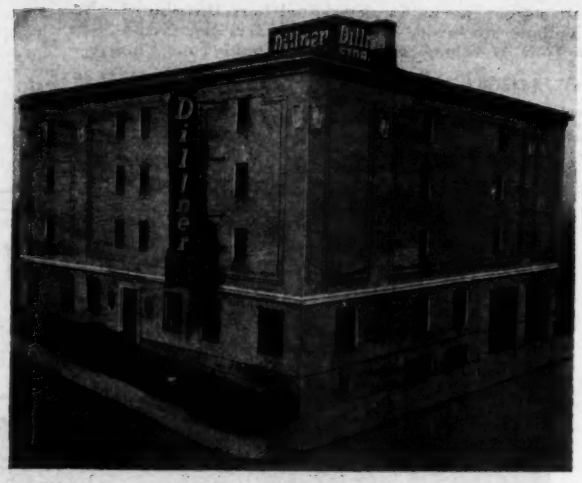
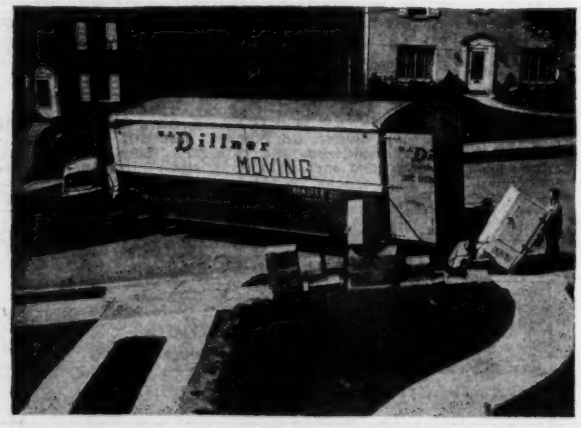
The Dillner "Plus" wins the



The Dillner headquarters in Dormont is the newest and most modern storage in Western Pennsylvania.

Below: Our 45 trucks are constantly on the move out of Pittsburgh—to Detroit, St. Louis, San Francisco, New York, Washington, Baltimore. Fast and efficient service obtained through expert dispatching and routing.



Here Are The Reasons—

Whether you have light office equipment or heavy industrial machinery to be moved and rigged—whether it is to be shipped 3 or 3000 miles—Dillner has the organization and the equipment to do the job rapidly and efficiently and at low cost.

Dillner trucks range from one to thirty-five tons and are licensed under state and federal authority to haul on both a local and interstate scope.

Expert crews are available with experience in hauling heavy machinery, safes, steel beams, and in rigging boilers, air-conditioning units, steam turbines, motor-generator sets, etc.

The large pickling tank shown below is an example of the massive equipment of every type that Dillner handles.

For office and home furnishings Dillner has crews of specialists in crating and packing to assure that everything arrives at its destination in the same condition in which it is shipped.

Dillner's highly trained employees are ready at

The familiar buff, green and white striped vans, the best available for moving purposes, are symbolic of the high quality of Dillner service.

Dillner Leadership

any time to give you figures on the cost of any moving operation from the simplest to the most complex.

ORGANIZATION . . . . . .

The Dillner organization sells transfer service of the highest type and is able to maintain this service to a remarkable degree in spite of the necessary restrictions of war-time conditions.

The men responsible for the maintenance of this service are John H. Dillner, Albert G. Dillner, and William J. Dillner, all of whom have grown up in the transportation business and have an intimate knowledge of all of its problems. Each one of them has first-hand experience in handling equipment and furnishings of all kinds and it is through this that they have been able to build up an organization of highly competent employees. Every Dillner employee is carefully trained in the proper method of handling materials of all types and years of experience have made the entire staff highly proficient.

These abilities together with an exceptional variety and quality of equipment are what have earned us our place among the foremost moving companies in Western Pennsylvania.

Fifty Years of Quackenbush Distribution

Naturally, we are proud of our fifty years of successful warehousing service here in Scranton. But this half-century has been one of growth and improvement as well as time.

Quackenbush, established back in the gay nineties, has kept pace with modern developments in its field—its plant, its equipment, its staff throughout are efficient—ready to meet tomorrow's requirements more fully than ever.

When we announce the celebration of our 50th anniversary, we do so not only with pride in our record, but with the knowledge that our customers, who have made the gratifying growth of Quackenbush possible, will also enjoy added service, efficient and economical handling of their goods and the confidence that Quackenbush will remain young and vigorous.

On the threshold of a new half-century, we salute our clients.

DEPENDABLE SERVICE WITH SECURITY

We receive annually millions of dollars worth of merchandise from nationally known manufacturers for delivery in Pacific, also Central States and intermediate region.

This company's experience has been more than one-third of a century without a loss to any customer. It is financially responsible and complies with bonded requirements. The organization's personnel includes some who have been active in directing the business from the time of incorporation in 1906.

Employees are under bond, and reliable; also trained to be efficient and conscious of the importance of strict attention to detailed instructions.

Storing spot stocks in a public warehouse is not only a selling stimulator for the trade already established, but economically safer as an experimental venture in new territory than leasing or purchasing a building, because sales-managers are not hampered by problems of operation and maintenance.

Some very large shippers have warehoused and distributed commodities here for over twenty years, due to our competent handling. Of course, smaller accounts are welcome too.

Traffic managers and other executives are cordially invited to communicate with us.

SALES AND TRAFFIC MANAGERS

The men to whom the stockholders look to steering the "ship" safely into harbor with the cargo which we call dividends.

We have a large number of national firms that are using our services and are doing a nice business, but there are others who we believe have never checked the opportunities Huntington, as a distributing center, has to offer as well as our services. This combination has helped others to not only increase their business but to hold it. Can you afford not to investigate this fertile field? If there is any specific information you need to make your decision which we can obtain for you, please feel free to call upon us. We will do our best and it will be as free as the air you breathe and you incur no obligation.

WHAT WE HAVE HERE FOR YOU

1. A branch house without the large maintenance cost. You know your exact cost per item.
2. Confidential service.
3. Over two hundred thousand square feet for merchandise storage.
4. All warehouses served by railroad sidings—no extra charge.
5. Signed receipts mailed daily for all merchandise delivered or shipped that day.
6. Collections remitted promptly.
7. Inventory of stock on hand mailed once each month.
8. Docks for more than fifty trucks served simultaneously. Your patrons pick up at one stop—no delays—saves time—saves money. They like it!
9. Warehouse equipment of all descriptions for quick handling of merchandise. Offices equipped with electric machines for caring for records quickly. Fleet of motor trucks for delivery of your orders to your customers. All this is for the exclusive use of our patrons' needs.
10. Storage in transit. Have had as many as two hundred cars from one firm at one time. It paid THEM. Could it be that YOU are overlooking something?

LET US HAVE YOUR PROBLEMS!

We have opened a storage-in-transit warehouse at Clarksburg, West Virginia which has over 125,000 sq. ft. of floor space. This is a fire-proof building and is sprinklered throughout—floor load unlimited. This is a great opportunity for storage-in-transit firms! Address all communications to main office at Huntington, W. If we all do our part, Hitler will be counted out before the end of '44. The boys over there are doing their part. It's up to us on the home front to back 'em to the limit. The quickest, simplest and most effective way is to buy more war bonds and keep them for the duration. It's the least any of us can do.

First Quarter Car Loadings Expected to Show Gain

Freight car loadings in the first quarter of 1944 are expected to be about 1.2 per cent above actual loadings in the same quarter in 1943, according to estimates compiled by the 13 Shippers' Advisory Boards. On the basis of those estimates, freight car loadings of the 28 principal commodities will be 8,138,332 cars in the first quarter of 1944, compared with 8,043,164 actual car loadings for the same commodities in the corresponding period in the preceding year. Ten of the 13 Shippers' Advisory Boards estimate an increase in carloadings for the first quarter but three (Southeast, Southwest and Trans-Missouri-Kansas) estimate decreases.

How War Has Affected Canadian Warehousing

The Canadian warehousing industry has not been accorded recognition as essential to the war that the industry in the United States has received, nevertheless, Canadian warehousemen have done much in furthering the war effort, and are still maintaining an adequate service to users in all sections of the Dominion.

By JOSEPH A. WHITMORE
Executive Secretary
Canadian Warehousemen's Assn.

SINCE the start of the war and the institution of Government control, the Canadian Warehousemen's Assn. has played a prominent part in the relations between the warehousing industry and government authorities in Canada.

To centralize the operations of the industry and to unify its representation to the government, the National Warehouse Industry Advisory Committee under the chairmanship of George A. Keates, has functioned since late 1941. Maintaining the closest possible contact with government authorities, the Committee has done a great deal to iron out the many problems which confront not only its own operators, but the various government departments.

Co-Operation With Government

The many meetings held with the Department of Agriculture, the Meat Board, the Wool Board, Dairy Products Board, Commodity Prices Stabilization Corp., Department of Labor, Administrator of Services, etc., have minimized to a great extent problems which might have arisen through a lack of any centralized representation. The Committee comprises representatives of the household goods, merchandise and cold storage divisions, the work of the secretary being combined with that of the executive secretarial duties of CWA.

In Canada, the industry has unfortunately, not been accorded the recognition of essentiality given to it in the United States. Although "AA" priority has been given to the cold storage division, merchandise warehouses find themselves in Class "B" and although household goods operators are functioning with a fair degree of efficiency, they have, up to now, received no recognition by the industrial Priorities Committee of National Selective Service at Ottawa.

Cold Storage

Every attempt has been made by the industry, its Advisory Committee and the Administrator of Services of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, to carry on this division of our business without unessential new construction.

There has been some conversion from cooler to freezer space and although the demand upon cold storage houses is excessive, we are, nevertheless, carrying on and fulfilling our obligations.

The industry, of course is directly concerned with carrying out the tremendous food program undertaken by the Department of Agriculture and its various divisions for bacon, beef, cheese and butter contracts to Britain. The industry has been requested to lend every possible co-operation toward the proper carrying out of these commitments and while a severe strain has been felt in some localities, in general, results have been satisfactory.

Dry Storage

One of the chief war jobs of the dry storage division has been the storage of tremendous quantities of wartime materials. A further contribution which the industry has made is through the storage of controlled food stuffs enabling the proper functioning of our Canadian rationing systems for such items as tea, coffee, sugar, etc.

In 1942, the industry co-operated with the government in drawing up a plan for pooling shipments of household goods. After some intensive work and investigation however, the scheme was dropped by the government and the industry set out to do a job within its own membership. Every effort has been made through the Association to urge members to conserve in the use of manpower and equipment, to pool loads wherever possible and, in general, to conduct operations with the most stringent internal economy.

As in the United States, there has also been a very considerable movement of government and armed force officials necessary to the setting up of new government control, and military establishments. Unfortunately for the industry in Canada, the contribution of this division and its own personal contribution to the the well-being and morale of civilian population has not been officially recognized. The Association, however, is taking every possible opportunity to establish this fact.

Post-War Problems

Much thought is being given in Canada, as in the United States, to the many problems which the post-war years will create for us. In all divisions, business has reached an abnormal peak, capacity is high and facilities are being strained. We must expect, however, in the post-war years, a return to normal business and normal occupancy. It is expected that for a short period after the end of the war, storage and distribution companies will do maximum business as a part of the general program necessary to the feeding and rehabilitation of the Allied and occupied territories.

Dry storage warehouses will undoubtedly feel the change-over considerably as the return to normal business takes place and commodities now rationed and in short supply return to normal occupancy. Return of normal stocks of canned goods, radios, washing machines, refrigerators, rubber tires, etc., will mean increased business for warehousemen, thus taking up the space now devoted to war goods and materials.

'Fictitious Prosperity'

Recently a household goods executive in the United States observed that this division of the business is experiencing a period of "fictitious prosperity." It is a certainty that return to a normal way of life will drain household goods warehouses of a considerable part of their present storage, although it is expected that pool car shippers and local and long distance movers will not feel the change-over for sometime.

The Canadian Warehousemen's Assn. in considering the post-war period, feels that if proper consideration is given to the subject by warehousemen, much good can come out of the lessons to be learned from the wartime restrictions and control. We have learned that customers both commercial storers and shippers, and the general public as well can be receptive to sensible restrictions and curtailment of service. We must see to it that we do not err again in over-selling our service or of selling our service on a rate basis. We should have learned that where service is a factor, a cut rate need not be so important in securing business.

Refrigerated Warehousing, Essential to Victory

WAR DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF THE QUARTERMASTER GENERAL
WASHINGTON

IN REPLY REFER TO SFQSS 673

16 November 1943

Gentlemen:

Your plant, together with many others in the Refrigerated Warehousing Industry, has been called upon to freeze and store substantial quantities of perishable food products for the use of the Armed Forces. The Industry has responded to this call with a fine spirit of cooperation, in many instances rendering service materially beyond that customarily performed.

These services, both to the War Department direct and to the numerous contractors furnishing perishable supplies, are vitally important to the safe and orderly movement of the merchandise. You may therefore be justifiably proud of your activities in this connection.

The freezing and storage of meats and poultry has at times taxed your facilities to the utmost. However, without the cooperative effort of the Refrigerated Warehousing Industry, it would not have been possible to freeze and accumulate over 10,000,000 pounds of turkeys for shipment overseas for Thanksgiving dinners for our Armed Forces.

Increasing need for your cooperative effort is indicated. The necessity for meeting shipping schedules cannot be over-emphasized. Peak conditions arise continually, but these problems must be met with the usual American ability to do the "impossible".

The War Department is pleased to express appreciation of the service you are performing, and may I suggest that this letter be brought to the individual attention of your entire organization as acknowledgment of the War Department of their personal contribution to the War Effort.

For The Quartermaster General:

Very truly yours,

Carl A. Harding

This Battery Charger will keep your Industrial Trucks on the job for longer periods by "On-The-Spot" Charging

"On-the-spot" battery charging saves time, manhours and materials by ending the need for "shipping" industrial trucks to a central charging station after long hauls or a hard day's work.

Spotted at strategic locations, they're always ready to keep your trucks on the job.

They're very easy to operate—just plug in and the unit does everything else, cutting off automatically at end of charge. Install them anywhere, move them readily to new locations.
